

Good Friday

Nail slices into hand
Blood bubbles up and drips into dirt
Body lifted from the ground
Scream of anguish

Pricks of thorns in forehead
Blurry crowds mocking, surreal
Parched throat, sponge of vinegar
Eerie darkness descends

Putrid sin thrust into Body
Scream of anguish
Abandonment, Trinity torn Temple curtain torn

Access to God granted
Pardon for sin paid
Blood drips into dirt
It is finished

John Donne's Poetry and Early Modern Visual Culture Ann Hurley, 2005 This study argues the thesis that John Donne's poetry already well served by the insightful close readings of earlier generations of scholars can now profit from being read in the context of early modern cultural experience specifically its visual culture It points out that the focus on visual culture allows for a non monolithic flexible reading of Donne's verse in part because it acknowledges that while the complexity of his religious identity has been well explored the complexity of his secular interest has perhaps been less thoroughly examined Since a study of early modern visual culture is deeply concerned with the vicissitudes of the image both religious and secular such a context serves to integrate what in Donne sometimes invites polarity Focused on close readings of several poems the study is in two parts On the one hand it examines the visual culture of early modern England and argues that reading Donne's poetry enhances our understanding of how that culture actually operated when looked at through the experience of a practicing poet the visual culture through which it participated adds a dimension to that verse that would otherwise be less accessible to us Ann H Hurley is Professor of English at Wagner College
