The dominant schools of neoclassical and neoliberal economics tell us that material scarcity is an inevitable product of an insatiable human nature Against this Costas Panayotakis argues that scarcity is in fact a result of the social and economic processes of the capitalist system The overriding importance of the logic of capital accumulation accounts for the fact that capitalism is not able to make a rational use of scarce resources and the productive potential at the disposal of human society Instead capitalism produces grotesque inequalities and unnecessary human suffering a toxic consumerist culture that fails to satisfy and a deepening ecological crisis Remaking Scarcity is a powerful challenge to the current economic orthodoxy It asserts the core principle of economic democracy that all human beings should have an equal say over the priorities of the economic system as the ultimate solution to scarcity and ecological crisis      The Global Resistance Reader Louise Amoore,2005 The Global Resistance Reader provides the first comprehensive collection of work on the phenomenal rise of transnational social movements and resistance politics from the visible struggles against the financial economic and political authority of large international organizations such as the World Trade Organization World Bank and International Monetary Fund to the much less visible acts of resistance in everyday life The conceptual debates substantive themes and case studies have been selected to open up the idea of global resistance to interrogation and discussion by students and to provide a one stop orientation for researchers journalists policymakers and activists      Global Activism Reader Luc Reydam,2011-01-13

Government and the Food Industry: Economic and Political Effects of Conflict and Co-Operation L. Tim Wallace, William R. Schroder, 2012-12-06 This book's purpose is to shed light on the threats and opportunities arising from the incentives and restrictions of governmental actions which food industry managers discover in their search for profits. The food industry as defined here includes farmers, their input suppliers, processors and distributors. This text explores how the private sector reacts to the stimulus of public support measures, rules and regulations which are usually motivated by entirely different ends than those desired within the private sector. No current single model of economic behavior as yet adequately encompasses or quantifies these complex vectors and forces. Management is comprised of many factors, most of which can be identified ex post but few of which can be appraised precisely ex ante. The perceptual processes by which managers respond to governments are influenced by culture, aptitudes, individual and collective goals. Details of most government business relationships are discussed. Few openly since management and government officials are understandably often reluctant to share the decision tree route by which trust is built and understandings are negotiated. Our text differs from others in that we combine both a theoretical and experiential approach to the subject. The insights provided by the case study material give a more macro and yet realistic view than that usually offered elsewhere. We indicate the risks and dynamics of the situations faced by management while also showing the importance and strategic relevance of a solid analytical foundation for managerial purposes.
