Sugar and Society in China Sucheta Mazumdar, 1998 In this study Sucheta Mazumdar offers an answer to the fundamental question of why China universally acknowledged as one of the most developed economies in the world throughout the mid 18th century paused in this development process in the 19th century Focusing on cane sugar production domestic and international trade technology and the history of consumption for over 1000 years as a means of framing the larger questions the author shows that the economy of late imperial China was not stagnant nor was the state suppressing trade indeed China was integrated into the world market well before the Opium War However the trajectory of development did not transform the social organization of production or set in motion sustained economic growth Studies of Chinese

Gjerston, 2010-12-31 Warring States Papers seeks to apply standard philological methods to major unsolved textual problems a to establish the nature and interrelations of the texts including the recognition of interpolations and of text growth generally b to date the texts or their constituent layers and finally c to read the history of the period from that newly available source material In both fields with their core of culturally protected texts these fundamental preliminaries have tended to be overlooked The Project's revolution in both its fields of concern has consisted in large part of not overlooking them Once the basic questions have been asked and at least in part answered the history of each period is more readily available for further study as such and for comparison with similar developments both ancient and modern New contributions developing this methodologically fresh beginning are welcome To encourage them and to ensure variety in each annual volume the journal emphasizes short articles rather than long disquisitions
