Notions of civilization and barbarism were intrinsic to Eugène Delacroix's artistic practice he wrote regularly about these concepts in his journal and the tensions between the two were the subject of numerous paintings including his most ambitious mural project the ceiling of the Library of the Chamber of Deputies in the Palais Bourbon Exiled in Modernity delves deeply into these themes revealing why Delacroix's disillusionment with modernity increasingly led him to seek spiritual release or epiphany in the sensual qualities of painting While civilization implied a degree of control and the constraint of natural impulses for Delacroix barbarism evoked something uncontrolled and impulsive Seeing himself as part of a grand tradition extending back to ancient Greece Delacroix was profoundly aware of the wealth and power that set nineteenth century Europe apart from the rest of the world Yet he was fascinated by civilization's chaotic underbelly In analyzing Delacroix's art and prose David O'Brien illuminates the artist's effort to reconcile the erudite tradition bound aspects of painting with a desire to reach viewers in a more direct unrestrained manner Focusing chiefly on Delacroix's musings about civilization in his famous journal his major mural projects on the theme of civilization and the place of civilization in his paintings of North Africa and of animals O'Brien links Delacroix's increasingly pessimistic view of modernity to his desire to use his art to provide access to a more fulfilling experience With more than one hundred illustrations this original astute analysis of Delacroix and his work explains why he became an inspiration for modernist painters over the half century following his death Art historians and scholars of modernism especially will find great value in

Independence Ahmed Bedjaoui,2020-03-25 The book examines the war of images between France and Algeria Discussing the role of the United States during the war it covers topics such the presence of American reporters in Algeria John F Kennedy's support for Algerian independence while a senator the broadcasting of documentaries on the Algerian war on public television and reporting in the press Even half a century after Algerian independence there remains a need for both film and literature on the war from both sides of the Mediterranean This might seem surprising particularly to media professionals given the quantity of output on the subject but both French and Algerian portrayals of the war remain flawed and shackled to their respective ideologies The generation of FLN leaders recognized early on the importance of images and established a clandestine film structure that would bring the Algerian cause to the world stage The book offers an insightful and timely contribution not just to the field of North African studies but also to other disciplines such as film and media studies anthropology history journalism and political science Providing a rich source of research topics and viable ideas for film and documentary projects it is a must read for students scholars and media professionals alike Genealogies of Orientalism Edmund Burke,David Prochaska,2008-07-01 Orientalism as explored by Edward Said in 1978 was a far more complex phenomenon than many suspected being homogenous along the lines of neither culture nor time. Instead it is deeply embedded in the collective reimaginings that were and are nationalism. The dozen essays in Genealogies of Orientalism argue that the critique of orientalism far from being exhausted must develop further. To do so however a historical turn must be made and the ways in which modernity itself is theorized and historicized must be rethought. According to Joan W. Scott, author of The Politics of the Veil, the essays in this collection develop a remarkable perspective on Edward Said's Orientalism, placing it in a long historical context of critiques of colonial representations and deepening our understanding of the very meaning of modernity. Looking beyond the usual geography of colonial theory, this work broadens the focus from the Middle East and India to other Asian societies. By exploring orientalism in literary and artistic representations of colonial subjects, the authors illuminate the multifaceted ways in which modern cultures have drawn on orientalist images and indigenous self-representations. It is in this complex cross-cultural collision that the overlapping of orientalism and nationalism can be found.

Renoir's Dancer Catherine Hewitt, 2018-02-27 Originally published United Kingdom Icon Books 2017 The Art Collector of Le Marais Ahmad Ardalan, 2019-02-05 In the city of lights Paris, the art capital of the world, how can one man stand above the rest? Ever since young Sebastian heard of his grandfather's chance meeting with the great Victor Hugo in 1877, he had been interested in literature, paintings and poetry. Wandering around various libraries and museums at an early age only stirred that curiosity into an immense passion within him: a deep love and desire for art. After realizing his dream of opening a gallery in the Le Marais district of Paris, Sebastian faces one hurdle after another. Bad luck, betrayal, revenge and fierce competition carry him to the verge of total collapse and failure, but through it all one question remained: How much of his life would Sebastian sacrifice for art, his first true love? Empire of Landscape John Zarobell, 2010 Explores visual culture and the social history of art through an analysis of French images of nineteenth-century Algeria.
