Reorganizing The Military Health System Should There Be A Joint Command:

Reorganizing the Military Health System Susan D. Hosek, Gary Cecchine, 2001 Since the end of WWII the question of whether to create a unified military health system has arisen repeatedly Despite a variety of answers to this question the system has largely retained its traditional structure with separate Army Navy and Air Force medical departments This book documents research on the organization of the military health system It considers 5 alternative organizational structures for their likely impact on peacetime health care and wartime readiness Reorganizing the Military Health System.

Should There Be A Joint Command?, 2001 This report documents research on the organization of the Military Health System MHS This research was initiated as part of a larger project to assess the organization and cost of the Department of Defense s TRICARE health benefits program A focus of this initial work was identifying organizational models in the civilian managed care sector that might be applied to TRICARE Subsequently the research expanded when the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 requested a study of the expansion of joint medical operations including an assessment of the merits and feasibility of establishing a joint command Responding to this request required further investigation of medical readiness and joint organizations and the development of alternative joint command structures This report should be of interest to those in the Congress the Department of Defense and elsewhere who are interested in the Military Health System Portions of this report may also interest those concerned about the design of health care organizations especially in the public sector The Military Health System, 2002 Defense health Care; DOD Needs to Address the Expected Benefits, Costs, and Risks for Its newly Approved Medical Command Structure, 2007

What the Army Needs to Know to Align Its Operational and Institutional Activities Frank Camm, Cynthia R. Cook, Ralph Masi, Anny Wong, 2007-01-24 The Army must transform its institutional activities to align them with operating forces to improve support and release resources from institutional activities This document provides a model for evaluating value chains to promote the alignment of needs and resources according to three representational institutional Army activities medical services enlisted accessioning and short term acquisition The Military Health System: How Might It Be Organized?, 2002 Since the end of World War II the issue of whether to create a unified military health system has arisen repeatedly Some observers have suggested that a joint organization could potentially lead to reduced costs better integrated health care delivery a more efficient administrative process and improved readiness A recent RAND study done for the Under Secretary of Defense Personnel and Readiness developed organizational alternatives for the military health system and outlined trade offs inherent in choosing among them This analysis as reported in Reorganizing the Military Health System Should there be a Joint Command by Susan D Hosek and Gary Cecchine concluded that careful consideration should be given to reorganizing TRICARE the military s health care program for active and retired military members and their families but that the additional benefits of a joint command are more difficult to assess Policy & Politics in Nursing and Health Care -

The Army Lawyer, 2014-07 Foundation for Integrating Employee Health Activities for Active Duty Personnel in the Department of Defense Gary Cecchine, 2009 If the Department of Defense DoD moves toward a more integrated employee health system a foundation of information about the current system and requisite elements for such integration will be needed The authors reviewed the research literature and DoD policy documents and interviewed DoD personnel to make several observations about the current state of safety and occupational health SOH arrangements in DoD Currently SOH policy cuts across several organizations at high levels in the Office of the Secretary of Defense and SOH programs are implemented by each of the military services Recently leadership attention has focused on safety mostly apart from occupational health as a separate priority DoD and the services have made efforts to increase coordination including both high level formal councils and through informal relationships among SOH practitioners Health promotion and wellness have received considerable attention within DoD through periodic health assessments and educational programs yet these areas have not benefited from the same increased coordination As DoD contemplates a more integrated approach the authors considered what DoD might learn from civilian experience with integrating employee health activities To address this the authors reviewed civilian models of integration to identify promising approaches and practices that might inform DoD efforts. The review of activities related to employee health in DoD including industrial hygiene safety health promotion and wellness occupational health and its relatively mature health information technology infrastructure indicates that there might be little need for DoD to introduce new programs but more need to make use of the information generated by the existing programs in a more coordinated integrated manner provided by publisher Triage for Civil Support Gary Cecchine, Michael A. Wermuth, Roger C. Molander, K. Scott McMahon, Jesse D. Malkin, 2004-12-02. Even before September 11 2001 threat assessments suggested that the United States should prepare to respond to terrorist attacks inside its borders. This monograph examines the use of military medical assets to support civil authorities in the aftermath of a chemical biological radiological nuclear or conventional high explosives attack inside the United States. The authors focus on key questions including under what circumstances military medical assets could be requested and what assets are likely to be requested.

Restoring Fiscal Sanity 2007 Alice M. Rivlin, Joseph R. Antos, 2007-11-01. Exceeding 2 trillion annually health care spending in the United States is growing significantly faster than the national economy. If left unchecked this health spending crisis will threaten Americans ability to pay for other essential services. Driven primarily by the cost of benefits promised to seniors under Medicare and Medicaid federal health expenditures will force lawmakers to make stark policy decisions. In this third volume of Restoring Fiscal Sanity policy experts suggest ways to slow the growth of federal spending on health care. Unless federal health spending can be brought under control Americans will face substantially higher taxes sharp reductions in other government programs and cuts in benefits to the elderly. Families businesses and communities will be forced to make agonizing choices between health care and other needs. Focusing on policies that do not shift costs to the states or the private sector the authors of Restoring Fiscal Sanity 2007 suggest reforms in federal programs that have the potential to reduce the growth of spending for the entire health system increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the care provided and enhance health outcomes. Drawing on years of government and public policy experience they stress the need for innovative approaches and cooperation between the private and public sectors. National Security Structure and Policy
