Engaging Currere Toward Decolonization Shauna Knox, 2021-12-12 This timely volume uniquely illustrates how currere can be applied to the process of decolonizing subjectivity Centered around the experiences of one black woman from the third world the text details the theoretical underpinnings of Currere towards Decolonizing CTD and walks the reader through the autobiographical analysis involved in dismantling cognitive colonization. Conceived as a four part autobiographical process of remembering, identifying, imagining, and decolonizing, the method of CTD is demonstrated as a means of recognizing and reflecting on how the colonial project has been internalized and of gradually dismantling the psychological, affective, and material impact of colonization. Using both theoretical and experiential standpoints and intersecting with notions of anti-blackness, linguicide, and Africana womanhood, the volume moves curriculum theory urgently towards anti-colonial mechanisms that disrupt the colonizing process. This text will benefit researchers, academics, and educators in higher education with an interest in curriculum studies, post colonialism, and Black studies more broadly. Those specifically interested in interpersonal psychoanalysis, as well as gender and third world studies, will also benefit from this book.

Companion Animals in Human Health Cindy C. Wilson, 1998. Exactly how do animals affect the quality of life of their human companions? The 7th International Conference on Animals, Health, and Quality of Life set out to explore this question. A major result of this quest was Companion Animals in Human Health, a careful selection of juried and invited papers from that conference. The articles in this volume address Human-Animal Interaction (HAI) according to the elements that define quality of life: physical, mental, emotional, and social health; functional health; and general well-being. Beginning with an overview of human-animal interaction from historical and value perspectives, the authors develop a conceptual framework for HAI research and quality of life measurement. They then go on to explore the psychosocial and physiological impact of HAI. The concluding sections address the role of companion animals in human development and the training and welfare of animals in therapeutic programs. As a state-of-the-science document, Companion Animals in Human Health is a must-read for all health and social science professionals caring for clients who already have companion animals or for clients who might benefit from such interaction. Thus, it will be of interest to those in the fields of clinical psychology, cognition, developmental psychology, family studies, gerontology, nursing, patient care, psychology, public health, and sociology. The Social Psychology of Aging Scott F. Madey, 2018-12-07. This special issue highlights how social psychology can further the understanding of important social health, interpersonal, and intergenerational issues facing people as they age. This issue has three goals: to generate more interest in aging as an area of study for social psychologists by showcasing researchers who are currently integrating basic social psychological research with issues in aging and lifespan development; to challenge readers to think about how their research programs can interconnect with issues in aging; and to demonstrate how social psychological processes have direct application to many of the issues facing people as they age. The Praeger Handbook of Mental Health and the Aging Community Doreen Maller, Kathy Langsam, 2017-11-27. A comprehensive book written by experienced practitioners, this single volume work describes clinical competencies, specific challenges, and applications in providing services to the elderly and their caregivers. More people are living past age 65 than ever before in the United States largely due to medical care advances and increased attention to preventive care The number of people aged 65 and older has increased from 35 million in 2000 to 40 million in 2010 and the elderly population is expected to reach 72 million by 2030 Additionally the American Psychological Association estimates at least 20 percent of all people aged 65 and older have a diagnosable mental disorder There is a clear need to provide additional training support to those in the field of elder care as well as those who are friends or family members of older adults Written by a team of experts each specializing in an aspect of elder care The Praeger Handbook of Mental Health and the Aging Community is a single volume text that addresses the training needs of mental health care providers serving the aging population It offers holistic and integrated models of care after presenting an in depth explanation of the brain body social and emotional changes across aging that can trigger psychological disorders The chapters pay attention to issues of diversity and culture in America s aging population present an integrated care model to serve all of the needs of mentally ill elders include numerous case studies to demonstrate how approaches can be utilized and discuss topics such as disability poverty and the legal and ethical ramifications of elder care

Social Structure and Aging K. Warner Schaie, Carmi Schooler, 2013-05-13 This volume presents a systematic examination of the impact of social structures on individual behaviors and on their development in adulthood and old age These papers and responses attempt to improve the reciprocal relationship between changes in social macro and micro structures and the process of psychological development in relation to issues of human aging Using and combining concepts and data from various fields this research promotes a better understanding of the effects of demographic patterns and social structures on the psychological development of adults
