Ruins of Absence, Presence of Caribs Maximilian Christian Forte, 2005 This study of a contemporary indigenous culture documents the vitality of a number of self constructed indigenous Carib communities in the postcolonial Caribbean These small groups which have asserted their presence through folklore tradition and ceremony have received recognition and support from the state attention from national media and a privileged place in historical discussions of the figure of the Carib The Caribbean is typically thought of as having no precolonial survivors Maximilian Forte demonstrates that this is not the case He convincingly argues that an indigenous presence has persisted in Trinidad and Tobago as an actual demographic presence and a symbolic force since the colonial period Focusing on the Santa Rosa Carib Community in Arima Trinidad he explores how Carib has come into being as a meaningful category in Trinidad how it has been challenged and reengineered and how it affects the relationship between colonial political economy and modern identity formation He also explores two previous resurgences of Amerindian community and identity in Trinidad in the 1820s and again in the 1870s to the 1920s Balanced between history and contemporary ethnography this book ranges from the analysis of the forces of globalization to the performance of local rituals By tracing notions and labels Carib Arawak Indian through time Forte shows how indigeneity is deeply enmeshed in historical processes and has deliberately been constructed from the time of the first encounters between Europeans and Trinidad s native peoples up to the present He maintains that the social position of Indian is created by various agents including culture brokers or intermediaries as well as by institutions such as the church and by organs of the state Using the individual biographies of activists in Arima where he conducted fieldwork for nearly four years Forte also shows how intracultural diversity looks at the ground level In addition his historical analysis offers a fascinating commentary on attitudes toward African European Asian and Venezuelan peoples and heritages and on the flow of images and information between the Americas and the Caribbean

Fictions of Land and Flesh Mark Rifkin,2019-08-23 In Fictions of Land and Flesh Mark Rifkin explores the impasses that arise in seeking to connect Black and Indigenous movements turning to speculative fiction to understand those difficulties and envision productive ways of addressing them Against efforts to subsume varied forms of resistance into a single framework in the name of solidarity Rifkin argues that Black and Indigenous political struggles are oriented in distinct ways following their own lines of development and contestation Rifkin suggests how movement between the two can be approached as something of a speculative leap in which the terms and dynamics of one are disoriented in the encounter with the other Futurist fiction provides a compelling site for exploring such disjunctions Through analyses of works by Octavia Butler Walter Mosley Nalo Hopkinson Melissa Tantaquidgeon Zobel and others the book illustrates how ideas about fungibility fugitivity carcerality marronage sovereignty placemaking and governance shape the ways Black and Indigenous intellectuals narrate the past present and future In turning to speculative fiction Rifkin illustrates how speculation as a process provides conceptual and ethical resources for recognizing difference while engaging across it island worlds      The Encyclopedia of Caribbean Religions Patrick Taylor, Frederick I. Case, 2013-04-30 The Encyclopedia of Caribbean Religions is the definitive reference for Caribbean religious phenomena from a Caribbean perspective. Generously illustrated, this landmark project combines the breadth of a comparative approach to religion with the depth of understanding of Caribbean spirituality as an ever-changing and varied historical phenomenon. Organized alphabetically, entries examine how Caribbean religious experiences have been shaped by and have responded to the processes of colonialism and the challenges of the postcolonial world. Systematically organized by theme and area, the encyclopedia considers religious traditions such as Vodou, Rastafari, Sunni Islam, Sanatan Dharma, Judaism, and the Roman Catholic and Seventh-day Adventist churches. Detailed subentries present topics such as religious rituals, beliefs, practices, specific historical developments, geographical differences, and gender roles within major traditions. Also included are entries that address the religious dimensions of geographical territories that make up the Caribbean. Representing the culmination of more than a decade of work by the associates of the Caribbean Religions Project, The Encyclopedia of Caribbean Religions will foster a greater understanding of the role of religion in Caribbean life and society in the Caribbean diaspora and in wider national and transnational spaces.

Home-based Economic Activities and Caribbean Urban Livelihoods Hebe Verrest, 2007 Poor urban households in the economic south deploy various livelihood activities. One of these is a Home-Based Economic Activity (HBEA), e.g., sales of home-made snacks or car maintenance. This study examines the prevalence, organisation, and relevance of HBEAs in four neighbourhoods in the Caribbean cities Paramaribo, Suriname, and Port of Spain, Trinidad, and Tobago. Recent economic developments in these countries diverge: Suriname recovers slowly from a crisis, while Trinidad and Tobago's economy is buoyant. These economic features, together with local political developments, have produced distinct institutional contexts. This gives ground for a comparison between the two cities. In addition, the study discusses the relevance of currently popular policies on entrepreneurship and micro-finance. The above issues have been assessed through use of multiple quantitative and qualitative methods. The study shows that forty percent of households in the examined neighbourhoods earn money through operating HBEAs. These are mainly operated by women and assist households in improving their livelihoods from a level of survival to a level of security. Most HBEA operators aim at earning additional incomes and reducing vulnerability. Only a small group meets the image of the classic operator who innovates, takes risk, and aims at growth and profit. The two groups organize their HBEA in very distinct ways. Differences between Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago are small. First of all, economic growth has limited impact on assets and vulnerability of low-income groups. Moreover, policies aiming at stimulation of entrepreneurship, such as micro-credit, are relevant to classic entrepreneurs and not to the large group of security-seeking HBEA operators.
