Feiock, 2016-07-08 City country consolidation builds upon the Progressive tradition of favoring structural reform of local governments This volume looks at some important issues confronting contemporary efforts to consolidate governments and develops a theoretical approach to understanding both the motivations for pursuing consolidation and the way the rules guiding the process shape the outcome Individual chapters consider the push for city county consolidation and the current context in which such decisions are debated along with several alternatives to city county consolidation The transaction costs of city county consolidation are compared against the costs of municipal annexation inter local agreements and the use of special district governments to achieve the desired consolidation of services The final chapters compare competing perspectives for and against consolidation and put together some of the pieces of an explanatory theory of local government consolidation The Adapted City H. Zhang, 2022-12-15 Why are some subnational governments more likely to lobby the national government than others Extant research in social sciences has widely discussed lobbying dynamics in the private sector. However, governments lobby governments too. In the United States, lobbying is a popular strategy for state and local governments to obtain resources from and influence policies in the federal government. Nevertheless, extant research offers limited theoretical analysis or empirical evidence on this phenomenon. This Element provides a comprehensive study of intergovernmental lobbying activities in the United States and, in particular, an institutional analysis of the lobbying decisions of state and local governments. The study findings contribute to public administration, public policy, and political science literature by offering theoretical and empirical insights into the institutional factors that might influence subnational policymaking, fiscal resource management, intergovernmental relations, and democratic representation.

Interest Group Politics in the Southern States Ronald J. Hrebenar, Clive Thomas, 1992-07-30. Underscores the pivotal and at times controlling role played by interest groups in southern politics. Public Affairs Information Service Bulletin, 1915.

How American Governments Work Roger L. Kemp, 2007-03-16. During the past two decades, many countries in the world have peacefully undergone a transition to more popular forms of self governance. The United States represents the world model for evolving forms of democracy. This volume details how government currently works in America. Forty essays examine the condition of all five levels of government in America: city, county, regional, state, and federal. They describe and examine the structures, operations, and services provided by each level, as well as how they are financed.

An American View into the Dutch Directed Society M. Blanken, 2012-12-06. The Netherlands is an unusual nation in many ways. It is not only that nearly half her land is below sea level. Nor is it that she is one of the world's most crowded lands: her more than 13 million people create a population density of about 1000 per square mile. Nor is it that half her national income is dependent upon world trade. Nor is it that so small a nation could achieve peace and prosperity with so little natural resources. What is most unusual is that the Netherlands has made such a rapid and total adjustment to the demands of modern technological society. In no small measure, this was achieved by a deliberate policy of planning, direction, control, and development. Its postwar history tells how a determined people, under intelligent government leadership, rose from a broken economy to a level of economic and social development that places their society among the most modern in the world. The Netherlands is a success story that in some measure has been overlooked by a wider world. This will be an attempt to record her story, touching upon some of the causes and results of this success. The Netherlands is undoubtedly one of the most planning-conscious of modern nations. This is not to say that the Dutch government or its people have any concept comparable to the totality of Soviet Five Year Plans.
