Economic Transformation and Income Distribution in China Over Three Decades Cai Meng, Bjorn Gustafsson, John Knight, 2023-11-08 It is arguable that the most important event in the world economy in recent decades has been the rise of China from being on a par with Sub Sahara Africa at the start of economic reform to being an economic superpower today That rise remains under researched Moreover the great structural changes which accompanied economic growth require examination The nationally representative China Household Income Project CHIP surveys conducted for the years 1988 1995 2002 2007 2013 and 2018 permit a detailed examination of many important aspects of a country's economic development Much of the analysis of this Element is closely related to and largely caused by China's remarkable economic growth and income distribution over the thirty years This title is also available as Open Access on Cambridge Core Happiness and Economic Growth Andrew E. Clark, Claudia Senik, 2014-11-20 This volume arising from a PSE CEPREMAP DIMeco conference includes contributions by some of the best known researchers in happiness economics and development economics including Richard Easterlin who gave his name to the Easterlin paradox that GDP growth does not improve happiness over the long run Many chapters underline the difficulty of increasing well being in developing countries including China even in the presence of sustained income growth This is notably due to the importance of income comparisons to others adaptation so that we get used to higher income and the growing inequality of income In particular rank in the local income distribution is shown to be important creating a beggar thy neighbour effect in happiness Wealth comparisons in China are exacerbated by the gender imbalance as the competition for brides creates a striking phenomenon of conspicuous consumption on the housing market Policy has to be aware of these effects This applies in particular to those who try to use self reported subjective well being in order to generate a social subjective poverty line which is a key issue in developing countries However the news is not only bad from the point of view of developing countries One piece of good news is that GDP growth often seems to go hand in hand with lower happiness inequality and thereby reduces the risk of extreme unhappiness

The Workers' State Meets the Market Sarah Cook, Margaret Maurer-Fazio, 2013-10-23 Among the most dramatic changes to affect China in the 1990s is the upsurge in labour mobility and the emergence of a market driven system of labour allocation changes which profoundly affect the working environment and livelihoods of the Chinese people Papers in this for migrants children the provision of sexual health services to migrants the housing conditions of migrants the mobilization of women workers social networks to improve labour protection and the role of NGOs in providing social services for migrants Throughout it pays particular attention to policy implications including the impact of the recent policy shift of the Chinese government which has made social issues more central to national development policies and has initiated policy reforms pertaining to migration Unemployment, Inequality and Poverty in Urban China Hiroshi Sato, Shi Li, 2006-09-27 Although the Chinese economy is growing at a very high rate there are massive social dislocations arising as a result of economic restructuring Though the scale of the problem is huge very few studies have examined the changes in income inequality in the late 1990s due to a lack of data on household incomes Based on extensive original research this book redresses this imbalance examining the issue of unemployment and the problems it has brought for the people of China Investigating the market outcomes in post reform urban China the book focuses on the relationships between unemployment inequality and poverty In addition the authors provide an analysis on the emerging urban labour market and its stratified structure job mobility profit sharing and the role of social capital Empirical analysis is supported by rich data from nationally representative urban household and rural migrant surveys providing the latest picture of the widening inequality in Chinese urban society China and the World Economy D.
