

Factional Politics:

- A political faction is a group of individuals that share a common political purpose but differs in some respect to the rest of the entity.
- A faction within a group or political party may include fragmented sub-factions, "parties within a party," which may be referred to as power blocs, or voting blocs.
- India lives in villages and rural India is full of social solidarity. The Indian villages are known as well-knit social units. People living in villages irrespective of their caste and vocation contribute to the unity of the village through peaceful co-existence and mutual support. They take pride in the image of their village. Of late unity of the village has been threatened by factionalism. Peace of the village has been affected by various small groups called factions. Ruralites no longer look forward to the leadership of a single individual called the headman of village. The headman is no longer the centre of power and authority in the village. Factional leaders are enjoying dominating positions and the headman is relegated to the background.
- Eventually the pattern of leadership has changed in the villages. There is growing dissention among factions. Competition for power among factions has led to intolerance, intrigues and violence. Peace of the villages is fast deteriorating. This changing scenario has been a matter of deep concern for the social thinkers and much deliberation is being made in this direction by the sociologists.
- A faction is a small group formed on the basis of political ideology, caste power, clash of personality in order to serve political, social and economic interests of a small minority. Sociologists are of the view that factionalism takes its ugly head in the rural communities on account of natural rivalry and conflict or clash of personality.

It has assumed so much of importance and significance that it has attracted the attention of social scientists policy makers and administrators.

Rural Development and Factional Politics K. G. Gurumurthy, 1988 India's rural sector still remains underdeveloped to a great extent inspite of her impressive achievements in the field of technology science human resources development Industry and Green Revolution. The developmental path chosen by Indian planners has failed to evenly spread the developmental benefits in area of health literacy and minimum subsistence needs. Various social science studies of development processes have either portrayed macro synoptic scenario largely based upon official statistics or have remained confined to micro level cognitive phenomonologism. The conflicting interest norm configurations inbuilt into socio cultural matrices and those generated by developmental inputs have tended to be grossly neglected in social science investigations of rural development processes.
