Rural Settlement Structure And African Development Marilyn Silberfein, 2019-09-16 This volume is the result of a group of researchers applying their insights and experience to a common theme All the authors are concerned with rural development in Africa and all have focused on the connection between the development process and the arrangement of people and their built environment in rural space Both anthropologists and geo graphers have contributed to the dialogue on this subject and represen tatives of the two disciplines are included in this volume The members of this group have never all been in the same place at the same time and so have utilized various electronic modes of commu nication to link their locations around the world Two conferences were organized however among a subset of the whole in order to generate a group discussion One of these meetings was a symposium on African rural development held at Temple University while a second was orga nized at the African Studies Association Meetings in Toronto Both opportunities helped raise issues that found their way into individual chapters The audience in each case further stimulated our thinking

Rural Arab Demography and Early Jewish Settlement in Palestine David Grossman,2017-09-08 This volume explores the distribution of the rural population in Palestine from the late Ottoman period 1870 1917 to the British Mandate period 1917 1948 The book focuses on demography specifically migrations population size density growth and the pattern of distribution in rural Palestine before the inception of Jewish settlement 1882 Grossman traces little known Muslim ethnic groups who settled in Palestine s rural areas primarily Egyptians but also Algerians Bosnians and Circassians The author argues that the Arab population in the zones occupied by Jews after 1882 was about one third that of the Arab core areas in the period studied the decline in per capita rural Arab farmland was mainly due to overall population growth not displacement of Arabs economic development suffered largely because of violent disturbances and natural disasters the pattern of growth of Egyptian and other Muslim groups was similar to that of the Jews The main conclusions of this study note that the size of the rural Arab population in the zones occupied by Jews after 1882 was about one tenth of that which occupied the Arab core zones most Egyptian settlement areas coincided with those of the Jewish zones between 1870 and 1945 the decline of Arab farmland was mainly due to Arab population growth rather than Jewish land acquisitions and most migrants Jewish and Muslim settlement zones were leftovers characterized by some form of resource disability

This two volume book presents cutting edge archaeological research primarily as practiced in the Eastern Mediterranean region. These volumes' key foci are inspired by the work of Thomas E. Levy. Volume 1 provides an in depth look at new archaeological research in the southern Levant primarily in modern Israel and Jordan inspired by Levy's commitment to understanding social, political and economic processes in a long term or deep time perspective. Volume 2 focuses on new research in several key areas of 21st century anthropological archaeology and archaeological science. Volume 1 is organized around two major themes: 1) the later prehistory of the southern Levant or the Neolithic Chalcolithic and Bronze Age and 2) new research in biblical archaeology or the historical archaeology of the Iron Age. Each section contains a combination of new perspectives on key debates and studies introducing new research questions and directions. Volume 2 is organized around five major themes: 1) the archaeology of the Faynan copper ore district of southern Jordan, a key region for archaeometallurgical research in West Asia where Levy conducted field research for over a decade; 2) new research in archaeometallurgy beyond the Faynan region; 3) marine and maritime archaeology focusing on issues of trade and environmental change; 4) cyber archaeology, an important 21st century field Levy conceived as the marriage of archaeology, engineering, computer science and the natural sciences; and 5) key issues in anthropological archaeological theory. In addition to presenting the reader with an up to date view of research in each of these areas, the volume also has chapters exploring the connections between these themes, e.g. the maritime trade of metals and cyber digital archaeological approaches to metallurgy. The work contains contributions from both up and coming early career researchers and key established figures in their fields. This book is an essential reference for archaeologists and scholars in related disciplines working in the southern Levant and the Eastern Mediterranean.

Jewish Settlement Patterns in Palestine, 1882-1914 Yossi Ben-Artzi, 1997 Jewish settlement patterns in Palestine are of interest because of their co operative forms the Kibbutz and the Moshav However the Jews preferred a different type of pioneer settlement the Moshavah For over 30 years the early settlers chose the Moshavah as the type of settlement most suited to lead them to their basic goal creating a Jewish village and structuring a new Jew a farmer who would live on his land and so lay the cornerstone of a renewed national home The cultural landscape of the Moshavah its planning its design and development constitute the subject of this book which studies the ideological aspirations of Jewish pioneers in Palestine and illustrates the link between ideology and landscape in their settlement patterns From Slumber to Awakening

Mishael Caspi, Jerome David Weltsch, 1998 From Slumber to Awakening argues that when investigating the cultural and historical predicament of segments of any society a close examination of the literal expression of the people is necessary to understand their human condition better To accomplish this the individual psyches of authors and poets must be delved into and in this case was accessed through personal interviews This study approaches the unique social position of the Arab Israelis through an exploration of culture and history The examination of the literature itself begins with Israeli literature from the broad perspectives of both the prose and poetry forms and then moving into the literature and literati themselves one by one exploring the lives of the writers while superimposing their human experiences with the expressions and stories of their creative works This examination along with the interviews defines the Arab Israeli minority as a group while also comparing them to Jewish Israeli writers who are close to the Arab Israeli situation

Roman Palmyra Andrew M. Smith II, 2013-01-02 In social economic and cultural terms the eastern frontier of the Roman Empire was vastly complex which has fueled considerable debate among scholars concerning the nature of the interactions between Romans and natives in the Near East Notions of imperialism specifically cultural imperialism frame much of the debate Through a detailed analysis of Palmyrene identity and community formation Andrew M Smith II presents a social and political history of Roman Palmyra the oasis city situated deep in the Syrian Desert midway between Damascus and the Euphrates river This city state is unique in the ancient world since it began as a humble community probably no more than an isolated village and grew due in part to its role in the caravan trade into an economically powerful cosmopolitan urban center of Graeco Roman character that operated outside of Roman rule yet under Roman patronage The book therefore focuses on two aspects of Palmyrene civilization during the first three centuries of the Common Era the emergence and subsequent development of Palmyra as a commercial and political center in the desert frontier between Rome and Parthia and later Persia and the making of Palmyrenes This study is thus concerned with the creation structure and maintenance of Palmyrene identity and that of Palmyra as an urban community in a volatile frontier zone The history of Palmyra s communal development would be wholly obscure were it not for the archaeological and epigraphic materials that testify to Palmyrene achievements and prosperity at home and abroad These complemented by the literary evidence also provide insight into the relatively obscure historical process of sedentarization and of the relationships between pastoral and sedentary communities in the Roman Near East In addition to examining Palmyra as a frontier community the book will move beyond Syria to explore the development and maintenance of Palmyrene identity in diaspora settings in Italy north Africa and Europe This study is thus concerned with the creation structure and maintenance of Palmyrene identity and that of Palmyra as an urban community in a volatile frontier zone
