Location of International Business Activities Academy of International Business, 2014-12-02 In recent years an extensive range of new research has been revisiting the topic of the location of international business activities from a variety of different perspectives and background interests This work has been inspired in part by two apparently quite different but actually related contemporary trends on the one hand an emergence or revitalization of clusters of activities co located in or around selected global city regions or fast growing metropolitan areas and on the other hand an increased global dispersion of activities conducted within the value chains managed or coordinated by many large multinational enterprises and their business partners The former trend has given rise to discussions of how the elite of the cultural cognitive economy of the 21st century in Allen Scott's terminology or the creative class Richard Florida's term are now being drawn or brought back to major urban centers while the latter trend is associated with debates over outsourcing and the economic and social consequences of shifts in the ownership and location of distinct nodes of value chains once production systems become more fragmented and the component parts of such systems become more geographically dispersed An increased interest in the subject of international business location has been shown by scholars in Strategic Management in Economic Geography and in Regional Science as well as in our own interdisciplinary field of International Business Studies However as is often the case in academic research communities these bodies of scholarship have tended to develop at something of a distance from one another each conversing internally more than they have with one another Location of International Business Activities aims to promote a greater conversation between those interested in the topic of Location from various different backgrounds or starting points The articles are taken from a special issue on the theme of the Multinational in Geographic Space which was published by The Journal of International Business Studies in 2013

Corporate Culture in Multinational Companies V. Miroshnik, D. Organisational Capital Ahmed Bounfour, 2008-12-04 There is much debate as to how companies carry out their activities in the context of new information and communication technologies influencing organizations to decentralize and develop new managerial practises including outsourcing and networking Recent theories have emphasized the importance of organization as a key component for building corporate competitive advantage and scholars have looked at this from a range of perspectives including in relation to intangible assets human capital work training and the process dimension Yet the concept of organisational capital as such in spite of its indubitable relevance and attractiveness is still to be clarified until now In this book the subject is approached in four ways Firstly from an analytical perspective what is the status of organisational capital as a concept and how is it defined secondly from an ontological perspective what type of implicit orders can be designed and implemented around organisations thirdly from the measurement perspective what kind of frameworks and what type of metrics can be prototyped and finally the implementation perspective how should organizations integrate the organisational capital perspective in the definition and implementation of their strategies for resources allocation The book provides the first multifaceted and international effort from a broad perspective aiming at clarifying the concept of organisational capital and determining its analytical and operational implications
