KIRDJALIS Erhan İnal, This book is an invitation to journey through the multilayered history of Thrace My aim is not merely to recount major historical events but to shed light on the everyday lives beliefs traditions and intercommunal dynamics of the peoples who once inhabited this region In presenting the history of Thrace I have sought to foreground intercultural interactions and to engage the reader with a narrative that is both scholarly and thought provoking Rather than offering a strictly chronological account this work explores critical turning points transformations of identity and traces of cultural heritage from the Thracian era through the Ottoman period In an age when historical narratives are often distorted by political agendas I believe it is essential to approach the history of Thrace from a more objective and multidimensional perspective Recent advances in fields such as genetic genealogy archaeogenetics and artificial intelligence have made it necessary to revisit and reinterpret conventional historical narratives This book has been written with these new perspectives in mind

Fingerprinting the Iron Age: Approaches to identity in the European Iron Age Cătălin Nicolae Popa, Simon Stoddart, 2014-09-30 Archaeology has long dealt with issues of identity and especially with ethnicity with modern approaches emphasising dynamic and fluid social construction The archaeology of the Iron Age in particular has engendered much debate on the topic of ethnicity fuelled by the first availability of written sources alongside the archaeological evidence which has led many researchers to associate the features they excavate with populations named by Greek or Latin writers Some archaeological traditions have had their entire structure built around notions of ethnicity around the relationships existing between large groups of people conceived together as forming unitary ethnic units On the other hand partly influenced by anthropological studies other scholars have written forcefully against Iron Age ethnic constructions such as the Celts The 24 contributions to this volume focus on the south east Europe where the Iron Age has until recently been populated with numerous ethnic groups with which specific material culture forms have been associated The first section is devoted to the core geographical area of south east Europe Bulgaria Croatia Romania Serbia and Slovenia as well as Albania and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia The following three sections allow comparison with regions further to the west and the south west with contributions on central and western Europe the British Isles and the Italian peninsula The volume concludes with four papers which provide more synthetic statements that cut across geographical boundaries the final contributions bringing together some of the key themes of the volume The wide array of approaches to identity presented here reflects the continuing debate on how to integrate material culture protohistoric evidence largely classical authors looking in on first millennium BC societies and the impact of recent nationalistic agendas
