Department of State, 1974. Comparative Literature and the Historical Imaginary Kaisa Kaakinen, 2017-06-12 This book argues that increasingly transnational reading contexts of the twenty first century place new pressures on fundamental questions about how we read literary fiction. Prompted by the stylistic strategies of three European migrant writers of the twentieth century Conrad Weiss and Sebald it demonstrates the need to pose more differentiated questions about specific effects that occur when literary narratives meet a readership with a heterogeneous historical imaginary. In conversation with reception theory trauma theory and transnational and postcolonial studies the study shows how historical pressures in the twentieth and twenty first centuries require comparative literature to address not only implied but also various unimplied reading positions that engage history in displaced yet material ways. This book opens new analytical paths for thinking about literary texts as media of historical imagination and conceiving relations between incommensurable historical events and contexts. Challenging overly global and overly local readings alike the book presents a sophisticated contribution to discussions on how to reform the discipline of comparative literature in the twenty first century. Decoding Astronomy in Art and Architecture Marion Dolan, 2021-09-17 For centuries our ancestors carefully observed the movements of the heavens and wove that astronomical knowledge into their city planning architecture mythology paintings sculpture and poetry. This book uncovers the hidden messages and advanced science encoded within these sacred spaces showing how the rhythmic motions of the night sky played a central role across many different cultures. Our astronomical tour transports readers through time and space from prehistoric megaliths to Renaissance paintings Greco Roman temples to Inca architecture. Along the way you will investigate unexpected findings at Lascaux Delphi Petra Angkor Wat Borobudur and many more archaeological sites both famous and little known. Through these vivid examples you will come to appreciate the masterful ways that astronomical knowledge was incorporated into each society's religion and mythology then translated into their physical surroundings. The latest archaeoastronomical studies and discoveries are recounted through a poetic and nontechnical narrative revealing how many longstanding beliefs about our ancestors are being overturned. Disorientation Karl Ashoka Britto, 2004-04-01 This book explores literary representations of cultural hybridity spanning nearly half a century a period marked by major shifts in Franco Vietnamese relations How can identity be thought and represented outside of the oppositional categories that divide cultures histories languages and races Can the intercultural subject be understood as more than a site of cultural contestation as anything other than a confrontation between incompatible binary opposites This book offers compelling responses to these questions through a series of close readings of francophone novels written by Vietnamese authors during and just after the colonial period While many contemporary studies of cultural hybridity tend to privilege the postmodern deconstructive play of postcolonial identities Disorientation seeks to uncover what is often obscured in such celebratory analyses the rigid and potentially traumatic conditions under which colonized subjects experienced the tensions and contradictions of intercultural identity The close readings that form the core of the book are inflected by cultural and historical considerations and informed by a range of primary documents that includes training manuals for colonial administrators works of imperialist propaganda tourist guidebooks and travel writing and textbooks from Franco Vietnamese schools These contextualized analyses recast the problem of interculturality in an Asian francophone context expanding the historical and cultural fields within which questions of identity and difference are currently discussed and offering a striking perspective from which to question postcolonial theories of hybridity
