Public Perception of Climate Change Bjoern Hagen,2015-11-06 Despite the findings on global climate change presented by the scientific community there remains a significant gap between its recommendations and the actions of the public and policy makers So far scientists and the media have failed to successfully communicate the urgency of the climate change situation in such a way that long term comprehensive and legally binding policy commitments are being made on the national and international level This book examines the way the public processes information how they perceive threats and other perceptual factors that have a significant effect on how and to what degree climate change mitigation and adaptation strategies are supported Understanding public risk perception plays a vital role in communicating the challenges of global climate change Using a diverse range of international case studies this book explores the nature of public perceptions of climate change and identifies the perception factors which have a significant impact on the public s willingness to support global climate change policies or commit to behavioral changes to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and improve urban resiliency The comparative study of social and cultural factors beliefs attitudes and trust provides an international overview of best practices regarding the design implementation and generation of public support for climate change policies at a global level Offering valuable insight into climate change and risk communication the book should be of interest to students and scholars of environment studies politics urban planning and media and cultural studies The Social Construction of Ancient Cities Monica L. Smith,2013-04-09 What made ancient cities successful What are the similarities between modern cities and ancient ones The Social Construction of Ancient Cities offers a fresh perspective on ancient cities and the social networks and relations that built and sustained them marking a dramatic change in the way archaeologists approach them Examining ancient cities from a bottom up perspective the authors in this volume explore the ways in which cities were actually created by ordinary inhabitants They track the development of urban space from the point of view of individuals and households providing new insights into cities roles as social centers as well as focal points of political and economic activities Analyzing various urban communities from residences and neighborhoods to marketplaces and ceremonial plazas the authors examine urban centers in Africa Mesoamerica South America Mesopotamia the Indian subcontinent and China Collectively they demonstrate how complex networks of social relations and structures gave rise to the formation of ancient cities contributed to their cohesion and sustained their growth much as they do in modern urban centers The authors analyses draw from ancient texts as well as archaeological surveys and excavations of urban architecture and other material remains including portable objects for daily use and comestibles They show clearly how early urban dwellers consciously developed dense interdependent social networks to satisfy their needs for food housing and employment forged their own urban identities and generally managed to thrive in the crowded bustling and competitive environment that characterized ancient cities Not least of all they suggest how urban leaders and urban dwellers negotiated a consensus that enabled them to achieve both mundane and extraordinary goals in the process establishing their unique ritual legal and social status Environmental and Natural Resource Economics Jonathan M. Harris,Brian Roach,2013-07-05 The Great Transition Lester R. Brown,2015-04-13 The great energy transition from fossil fuels to renewable sources of energy is under way As oil insecurity deepens the extraction risks of fossil fuels rise and concerns about climate instability cast a shadow over the future of coal a new world energy economy is emerging The old economy fueled by oil natural gas and coal is being replaced with one powered by wind solar and geothermal energy The Great Transition details the accelerating pace of this global energy revolution As many countries become less enamored with coal and nuclear power they are embracing an array of clean renewable energies Whereas solar energy projects were once small scale largely designed for residential use energy investors are now building utility scale solar projects Strides are being made some of the huge wind farm complexes under construction in China will each produce as much electricity as several nuclear power plants and an electrified transport system supplemented by the use of bicycles could reshape the way we think about mobility
