Remembering to Forget Barbie Zelizer,1998-12

There is no more gruesome and tragic record in the history of the twentieth century than the photographs taken at the liberation of the concentration camps in Germany after World War II. Our memory of the Holocaust has been shaped by these images and they are seared into our collective consciousness as brutal evidence of the atrocity of war and the evil of which humanity is capable. In her new book Barbie Zelizer reveals the unique significance of the concentration camp photographs while being mindful of Leon Wieseltier's call to be strangers to these images. If we are not strangers, he wrote, if the names of the killers and the places of the killing and the numbers of the killed fall easily from our tongues then we are not remembering to remember but remembering to forget. Zelizer shows how the photographs have become the basis of our memory of the Holocaust and how they have affected our presentations and perceptions of contemporary history's subsequent atrocities.

Working the Past Charlotte Linde, 2009. Stories told within institutions play a powerful role helping to define not only the institution itself but also its individual members. How do institutions use stories? How do those stories both preserve the past and shape the future? To what extent does narrative construct both collective and individual identity? Charlotte Linde's unique and far-reaching study addresses these questions by looking at the interplay of narratives, memory, and identity in a large insurance company. Her detailed ethnography looks at the role of stories within the institution and how they are employed by its members in both private and group settings. Analyzing the re-telling of certain key stories, she shows how the formation of core stories and their multiple re-tellings and modifications provide a means of formulating and promoting a cohesive group identity which in turn shapes the stories and identities of the individuals within the collective. Linde also looks at silences and how stories not told also convey their version of the past. Working the Past shows how stories that might otherwise be seen as part of mundane daily life are in fact utterly essential to the formation and maintenance of individual and group identity. Her original research will appeal to those interested in narrative studies, linguistics, anthropology, sociology, and institutional memory.

Digital Anthropology Heather A. Horst, Daniel Miller, 2020-05-26. Anthropology has two main tasks: to understand what it is to be human and to examine how humanity is manifested differently in the diversity of culture. These tasks have gained new impetus from the extraordinary rise of the digital. This book brings together several key anthropologists working with digital culture to demonstrate just how productive an anthropological approach to the digital has already become. Through a range of case studies from Facebook to Second Life to Google Earth, Digital Anthropology explores how human and digital can be defined in relation to one another, from avatars and disability to cultural differences in how we use social networking sites or practise religion, the practical consequences of the digital for politics, museums, design, space, and development, to new online world and gaming communities The book also explores the moral universe of the digital from new anxieties to open source ideals Digital Anthropology reveals how only the intense scrutiny of ethnography can overturn assumptions about the impact of digital culture and reveal its profound consequences for everyday life Combining the clarity of a textbook with an engaging style which conveys a passion for these new frontiers of enquiry this book is essential reading for students and scholars of anthropology media studies communication studies cultural studies and sociology

Common Spaces Between Us Melynne Rust,2020-01-09 Polarization occurring in the United States today is not only a social concern it s also a spiritual condition of the heart How can we connect with others in the midst of our differences when deep in our hearts we might harbor shadows such as judgment or fear In Common Spaces Between Us Melynne Rust explores this question by inviting readers into the diverse college campus community where she served as chaplain and where much to her surprise and chagrin she found herself struggling at times to connect with students amid differences She was skeptical of Muslim students requesting bidets in the chapel bathrooms She balked at visiting a student in the hospital psychiatric unit She was afraid to publicly stand up for LGBTQ students She butted heads with students who shared her religion but not her beliefs She had presumed she inherently would live out her values to honor the dignity and equality of all yet in her interactions with others she kept bumping into her own shadows stifling connection Ultimately she discovered that true connection happens when we embody practices that recognize honor and nurture the good in both ourselves and others in the common spaces between us
