

Raw Materials Acquisition

Raw Materials

Silver: They usually come from Mexico, Peru, and Australia, which are some of the largest producers of silver in the world.

Copper: They were often mined in Chile, Peru, and United States.

Woods: The sources of different woods are depending on different regions and the availability of the specific wood in that area.

Carbs: They were obtained from the bark of cork oak trees, which are typically grown in Mediterranean region.

Embedded Energy

Metal mining and extraction uses kinetic, electrical, chemical, and thermal energy. The fuels used in carb production are harvested utilizing electric cars which use kinetic and electric energy.

Waste & Emissions

The flute is mainly made out of metals such as silver and gold. These metals need to be extracted and mined which causes mercury emissions and other wastes that contain cyanide.

Manufacturing, Processing & Formulation

Raw Materials

Silver is mostly used for manufacturing flutes because of its bright and clear sound. Copper, nickel and wood are often used in manufacturing flutes. During the production, carb will act as fillers for the gaps, and these materials will be shaped into different forms and be put in place.

Embedded Energy

The manufacturing process primarily utilizes thermal, electric, and kinetic energy through machinery and human labor during its assembly. Thermal energy is also used during the electroplating process which plates the flute at the end.

Waste & Emissions

Copper nickel alloy, a common metal found in flutes is created by the process of smelting. Smelting causes water pollution and emits harmful air pollutants such as sulfur dioxide which are major factors for air and water pollution. When the metal parts are cut and shaped, scrap metals are produced.

Distribution & Transportation

Raw Materials

Trucks and bubble wrap are the materials used to protect flutes during transportation. Sometimes they need to use small boats for transporting flutes. Nowadays, some flutes are using electric vehicles.

Embedded Energy

Small boats are used during the transportation of raw materials to factories and storage warehouses as well as the delivery of the instrument to stores or homes.

Waste & Emissions

The cargo ships that transport materials from one country to another create a lot of carbon dioxide, contributing to the amount of greenhouse gas emissions. The road trucks that transport and deliver the materials to and from factories also emit carbon dioxide and CO₂.

Use, Reuse & Maintenance

Raw Materials

These materials, including silver, gold, or wood, can be used for a very long period of time. Silver that cannot be used to perform, they can be used as metal decorations.

Embedded Energy

Fluted flutes are while providing various key paths to play, the flute which involves kinetic energy. Maintenance, adjustments, and repairs are usually done by fluted due to its delicate structure.

Waste & Emissions

To maintain proper care of a flute, a care kit usually containing a puff cloth, cleaning rag, and breathers are enough to keep the flute clean. However, it is a good idea to take the flute to a repair shop once a year where a little bit of oil may be used to ease tension between metal parts.

Recycling

Raw Materials

Metals, wires, springs, screws, and joints need to be replaced. Location: New pad are usually needed for rebuilding a flute.

Embedded Energy

Flutes may be recycled as scrap metal which involves shredding, shearing, compacting, using electrical energy, and thermal energy for melting the metals, and finally kinetic for metal solidification.

Waste & Emissions

The metal components of the flute as well as the scrap metals can be recycled by smelting. This process results in air-borne fumes and dust.

Waste Management

Raw Materials

No materials are used in this stage of life cycle.

Embedded Energy

No new energy is used during the waste management stage of the life cycle about flutes are typically not thrown away and can be recycled as scrap metal.

Waste & Emissions

Flutes are not thrown out as the metals can be smelted and reused to create new flutes.
