born in China or elsewhere who came here to work and do business including seeking help from others who have ethnic Chinese connections With the political and economic conditions of the region in a great state of flux for the past two centuries it is impossible to find consistency in the naming process Confucius had stressed that correct names make for the best relationships In this case Professor Leo Suryadinata has been pursuing for decades the elusive goal of finding the right name to give to the large numbers of people who have in one way or another made their homes in or made some difference to Southeast Asia I believe that when he and his colleagues selected the biographies to be included here they have taken a big step towards the rectification of identities for many leading personalities In so doing he has done us all a great service

Winning Global Markets Philip Kotler, Milton Kotler, 2014-08-18 A new marketing paradigm focuses on the concentrated economic power of 600 global cities. City Centered Marketing: Why Local is the Future of Global Business is a compelling practical analysis of a new direction of marketing within the context of intensifying urbanization and the shift of global economy from West to East. Philip Kotler, one of the world's foremost marketing experts, and his brother Milton, an international marketing strategist, explain why the future of marketing must focus on top global cities and their metro regions and not squandered resources on small cities. Marketing is city centered activity. 600 global cities will contribute 65 percent of the global GDP of 67 trillion by 2025. The top 100 cities will contribute 25 percent of GDP and 440 of these top 600 cities will be in the developing world. Top cities have to improve their marketing prowess to compete for the right companies and settling on the best terms. By 2025 the vast majority of consuming and middle income households will be in developing regions. While New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago will remain major players because of high per capita GDP and capital and intellectual assets, companies will pay more attention to growing city regions in the developing world. Multinational businesses must change the culture of their headquarters, divisions, and branches as well as their value chain stakeholders to take advantage of these market changes. The book details the strategies for sustainable growth with topics like Resource allocation in developed versus developing city markets, Shifting the focus to city regions instead of central governments, The rise of new multinational corporations from developing economies, Declining consumer and business growth in developed cities. Cities in China, Brazil, India, and throughout the Middle East and Latin America are rising to become major players in the global marketplace. Philip and Milton Kotler argue that an inversion is taking place and top cities are growing economically faster than their national rate of growth. These emerging city markets are critical to company growth and City Centered Marketing: Why Local is the Future of Global Business provides the vital information and guidelines that companies need to plan accordingly.

Review of Marketing Research Naresh Malhotra - USE 0493, 2011-07-21 This special issue of Review of Marketing Research is unique in that it contains chapters by marketing legends in their own words. Bagozzi, Hunt, Kotler, Kumar, Malhotra, Monroe, Sheth, Wind, and Zaltman summarize not only their research but also the salient aspects of their academic life journeys.

Attracting Investors Philip Kotler, Hermawan Kartajaya, S. David Young, 2004-09-24 Marketing guru Philip Kotler shows entrepreneurs how to market their companies to investors. How can businesses do a better job of attracting capital The answer Marketing Marketing expert Philip Kotler teams up with a renowned marketing consultant and an INSEAD professor for this practical marketing based approach to raising capital from investors Based on the premise that entrepreneurs and business owners often don't understand what investors want and how they make their decisions Attracting Investors offers a larger view of the factors involved and guides both startup and veteran firms in effectively raising capital International Finance G. Shailaja, 2008 Asia's Credit Markets Florian Schmidt, 2004-04-27 Publisher Description Asia, Inc, 2004 Emerging Urbanity Richard Marshall, 2013-09-05 Discussions on the global economy focus on the hyper mobility of capital the possibility of instantaneous transmission of information and money around the globe the centrality of information outputs to our economic systems and emphasise the neutralisation of geography and of places What is ignored however is that even the most advanced information industries need a material infrastructure of buildings and work processes and considerable agglomeration in order to operate in global markets Further the globalisation of economic activity has brought with it not only a vast dispersal of offices and factories but also a growing importance of central functions to manage and coordinate such worldwide networks of activities The development of global urban projects is one manifestation of this move towards centrality in urban situations These large scale urban projects are the result of governments seeking competitive advantage in the global economy They are critical components of a nation's global infrastructure In the booming economies of the Asia Pacific Rim prior to the Asian Economic Crisis these urban developments were seen as key components of national economic policies In their making they require a conscious effort to arrange material infrastructure and reinforce that there is a role for urban design in this making Emerging Urbanity is an exploration of this role in nine global urban projects in the Asia Pacific Rim MarkPlus on Marketing, Asia and Pacific Bibliography, 2003
