The need to learn about discipline-specific writing

During a conversation, this question came up: “what should we know to become an effective ESP writing teacher?” I blurted out this answer: “Everything!” I was perhaps thinking of Mary Norris, the copy editor for The New Yorker and author of Between you and me: Confessions of a Copy Queen. She describes the job of a copy editor as “drawing upon the entire person: not just your knowledge of grammar and punctuation and usage and foreign languages and literature but your experience of travel, gardening, shipping, singing, plumbing, Catholicism, midwesternism, mozzarella, the A train, New Jersey. And in turn it feeds you more experience” (Norris, 2015, p. 12). To me, that’s not too far off from the knowledge base of an LSP writing teacher. “Oh. Come on. That is an insanely lofty and completely unattainable goal”, came the good-humored protest. The protester does have a point. Nobody can know everything. One of the pleasures of being an LSP practitioner and a writing teacher is that there is always something new to learn. What is this next “something new”, though? Since then, I have been thinking about this question. As LSP practitioners who are also researchers, we can look at the literature. There, LSP teacher education researchers have sketched out multiple topic areas that can form our knowledge base (Basturkmen, 2014). We can also look carefully at our classes. When Kuteeva (2013) looked at one of her graduate-level writing classes, for example, she saw many things; one of them was the “very wide spectrum of epistemological traditions... ranging... from lab-based osteoarchaeology to logic-driven philosophy to source-based history or musicology to emerging interdisciplinary fields such as fashion studies or performing arts” her graduate students represented (p. 86). Indeed, having a

Bringing together scholarship and pedagogy from a multiple of perspectives and disciplines to provide a broader and more complex understanding of information literacy and suggests ways that teaching and library faculty can work together to respond to the rapidly changing and dynamic information landscape Provided by publisher Graduate Writing Across the Disciplines Marilee Brooks-Gillies,Elena Adkins Garcia,Soo Hyon Kim,Katie Manthey,Trixie G Smith,2020 In Graduate Writing Across the Disciplines the editors and their colleagues argue that graduate education must include a wide range of writing support designed to identify writers needs teach writers through direct instruction and support writers through programs such as writing centers writing camps and writing groups The chapters in this collection demonstrate that attending to the needs of graduate writers requires multiple approaches and thoughtful attention to the distinctive contexts and resources of individual universities while remaining mindful of research on and across similar programs at other universities

Academic Discourse Across Disciplines Ken Hyland, Marina Bondi, 2006 This volume reflects the emerging interest in cross disciplinary variation in both spoken and written academic English exploring the conventions and modes of persuasion characteristic of different disciplines and which help define academic inquiry This collection brings together chapters by applied linguists and EAP practitioners from seven different countries The authors draw on various specialised spoken and written corpora to illustrate the notion of variation and to explore the concept of discipline and the different methodologies they use to investigate these corpora The book also seeks to make explicit the valuable links that can be made between research into academic speech and writing as text as process and as social practice

Writing in the Academic Disciplines, 1870-1990 David R. Russell, 1991 In this singular study David R Russell provides a history of writing instruction outside general composition courses in American secondary and higher education from the founding of public secondary schools and research universities in the 1870s through the spread of the writing across the curriculum movement in the 1980s Russell's task is to examine the ways writing was taught in the myriad curricula that composed the varied structure of secondary and higher education in modern America He begins with the assertion that before the 1870s writing was taught as ancillary to speaking As a result formal writing instruction was essentially training in handwriting the mechanical process of transcribing sound to visual form From this point Russell carefully examines academic writing its origins and its teaching from a broad institutional perspective He looks at the history of little studied genres of student writing such as the research paper lab report and essay examination Tracing the effects of increasing specialization on writing instruction he notes how two new ideals of academic life research and utilitarian service shaped writing instruction into its modern forms Finally he contributes the definitive history of the current writing across the curriculum movement providing a study of the long tradition of other WAC efforts with an analysis of why they have waned

Exploring College Writing Dan Melzer, 2011 Exploring College Writing Reading Writing and Researching across the Curriculum is a rhetoric for first year and sophomore composition courses that uses a constructivist ethnographic approach to introducing students to academic reading writing and researching This text will be especially useful to composition instructors who wish to provide students with both a general overview of academic discourse and an introduction to the purposes audiences and genres of writing across disciplines This textbook works from the premise that the best way to initiate students to academic discourse is to have them explore academic literacies using an ethnographic fieldwork approach to their own institution Students are cast in the role of researchers exploring their own experiences as college writers and investigating writing in General Education and in their prospective majors The book provides instructors and students sequences of engaging and exploratory

Writing to Learn and Learn by Doing activities and formal extended writing projects that ask students to interview professors analyze writing assignments and reflect on their own reading writing and researching processes and histories These writing projects connect to students interests experiences and goals and provide them with a sense of purpose and audience for writing The organization of Exploring College Writing moves students from reflection to investigation Part I of the book provides a broad introduction to academic reading writing and researching and introduces students to the rhetorical situation genres and common college thinking and writing strategies Part I presents students with prompts that ask them to explore the similarities and differences between high school and college literacy and reflect on their own literacy histories Part II asks students to think critically about their reading writing and researching processes and to explore strategies for college reading writing and researching processes Part II includes prompts that ask students to explore college reading writing and researching processes and practice academic research and making academic arguments Part III introduces students to writing across the curriculum and the idea of disciplines and discourse communities Part III asks students to investigate the reading writing and researching assigned in the General Education and major courses at their campus and to consider discipline specific ways of writing and thinking Unlike other textbooks Exploring College Writing uses authentic student and professional texts from across disciplines in a variety of genres such as lab reports scholarly book reviews ethnographies and case studies to guide and inspire the writing process
