

Background to second language acquisition research and language teaching

Language is at the centre of human life. We use it to express our love or our hatred, to achieve our goals and further our careers, to gain artistic satisfaction or simple pleasure, to pray or to blaspheme. Through language we plan our lives and remember our past; we exchange ideas and experiences; we form our social and individual identities. Language is the most unique thing about human beings. As Cicero said in 55 bc, 'The one thing in which we are especially superior to beasts is that we speak to each other.'

Some people are able to do some or all of this in more than one language. Knowing another language may mean: getting a job; a chance to get educated; the ability to take a fuller part in the life of one's own country or the opportunity to emigrate to another; an expansion of one's literary and cultural horizons; the expression of one's political opinions or religious beliefs; the chance to talk to people on a foreign holiday. A second language affects people's careers and possible futures, their lives and their very identities. In a world where probably more people speak two languages than one, the acquisition and use of second languages are vital to the everyday lives of millions; monolinguals are becoming almost an endangered species. Helping people acquire second languages more effectively is an important task for the twenty-first century.

1.1 The scope of this book

The main aim of this book is to communicate to those concerned with language teaching some of the ideas about how people acquire second languages that emerge from second language acquisition (SLA) research, and to make suggestions of how these might benefit language teaching. It is not a guide to SLA research methodology itself, or to the merits and failings of particular SLA research techniques, which are covered in other books, such as Second Language Learning Theories (Myles and Mitchell, 2004). Nor is it an overall guide to the methods and techniques of language teaching; only to those which are related to an SLA research perspective. It is intended for language teachers and trainee teachers. Most of the time it tries not to take sides in reporting the various issues; inevitably my own interest in the multi-competence approach is hard to conceal.

Much of the discussion concerns the L2 learning and teaching of English, mainly because this is the chief language that has been investigated in SLA research. English is used here, however, as a source of examples rather than forming the subject matter itself. The teaching and learning of other modern languages are discussed when appropriate. It should be remembered that the English language is often in a unique situation, being the only language that can be used almost anywhere on the globe

Research In Second Language Learning Focus On The Classroom:

Research in Second Language Learning James P. Lantolf, Angela Labarca, 1987 The volumes in this series are intended to bring to an extended reading public select papers from the annual symposia on language studies held at the University of Delaware These symposia are sponsored by the program in linguistics at the university Each year a general theme in applied linguistics is chosen and a call is sent out for papers dealing with that theme in some way First Language Use in Second and Foreign Language Learning Miles Turnbull, Jennifer Dailey-O'Cain, 2009 This book focuses on the use of the first language in communicative or immersion type classrooms Through the intersection of theory practice curriculum and policy the volume calls for a reconceptualization of code switching as something that both proficient and aspiring bilinguals do naturally and as a practice that is inherently linked with bilingual code switching Handbook of Research in Second Language Teaching and Learning Eli Hinkel, 2011-01-25 This landmark volume provides a broad based comprehensive state of the art overview of current knowledge and research into second language teaching and learning All authors are leading authorities in their areas of expertise The chapters all completely new for Volume 2 are organized in eight thematic sections Social Contexts in Research on Second Language Teaching and Learning Second Language Research Methods Second Language Research and Applied Linguistics Research in Second Language Processes and Development Methods and Instruction in Second Language Teaching Second Language Assessment Ideology Identity Culture and Critical Pedagogy in Second Language Teaching and Learning Language Planning and Policy Changes in Volume 2 captures new and ongoing developments research and trends in the field surveys prominent areas of research that were not covered in Volume 1 includes new authors from Asia Australia Europe and North America to broaden the Handbook's international scope Volume 2 is an essential resource for researchers faculty teachers and students in MA TESL and applied linguistics programs as well as curriculum and material developers Second and Foreign Language Learning Through Classroom Interaction Joan Kelly Hall, Lorrie Stoops Verplaetse, 2000-06-01 This volume brings together the current theoretical interest in reconceptualizing second and foreign language learning from a sociocultural perspective on language and learning with practical concerns about second and foreign language pedagogy It presents a set of studies whose focus is on the empirical description of particular practices constructed in classroom interaction that promote the learning of a second or foreign language The authors examine in detail the processes by which the learning of additional languages is accomplished in the interaction of a variety of classrooms and in a variety of languages Not only will the findings from the studies reported in this volume help to lay a foundation for the development of a more expansive sociocultural model of second and foreign language learning but on a more practical level they will help language educators in creating a set of principles for identifying and sustaining classroom interactional practices that foster additional language development The volume is distinguished in three ways Following a Vygotskian perspective on development the studies assume that language learning is a fundamentally pragmatic enterprise intrinsically linked to language use This breaks from a more traditional understanding of second and foreign language learning which has viewed learning and use as two distinct phenomena The importance of classroom interaction to additional language development is foregrounded The investigations reported in this book are distinguished by their methodological approach Because language learning is assumed to be a situated context sensitive and dynamic process the studies do not rely on traditional experimental methods for collecting and analyzing data but rather they involve primarily the use of ethnographic and discourse analytic methods The studies focus on interactional practices that promote second and foreign language learning Although a great deal of research has examined first language learning in classrooms from a sociocultural perspective little has looked at second and foreign language classrooms from such a perspective Thus there is a strong need for this volume of studies addressing this area of research Researchers teacher educators and graduate students across the fields of second and foreign language learning applied linguistics and language education will find this book informative and relevant Because of the programmatic implications arising from the studies it will also appeal to teacher educators and teachers of second and foreign languages from the elementary to the university levels

AFFECT IN FOREIGN LANGUAGE AND SECOND LANGUAGE LEARNING Dolly J. Young, 1999 Affect in Foreign Language and Second Language Learning offers high school and college university second language teachers or teachers in training practical suggestions for creating activities that take into account learner anxieties frustrations or discomfort in the language learning process The objective of the book is to offer concrete instructional approaches for language learning that are rooted in second language acquisition research and at the same time that promote a low anxiety classroom environment The authors of each chapter are specialists in specific areas of language learning and their essays composed specifically for this volume lay the groundwork for continued research on affect in language learning This text is part of the McGraw Hill Second Language Professional Series edited by James F Lee and Bill VanPatten

Extending the Boundaries of Research on Second Language Learning and Teaching Mirosław Pawlak, 2011-08-30 The book contains a selection of papers reflecting cutting edge developments in the field of learning and teaching second and foreign languages The contributions are devoted to such issues as classroom oriented research sociocultural aspects of language acquisition individual differences in language learning teacher development new strands in second language acquisition research as well as methodological considerations Because of its scope the diversity of topics covered and the adoption of various theoretical perspectives the volume is of interest not only to theorists and researchers but also to methodologists and practitioners and can be used in courses for graduate students
