NORTHERN EURASIA 2023

after the final dismantling of the Moscow Empire through the complete Decolonization of the so-called "Russian Federation" and the reconstruction of independent and free states of the post-Russian space

The map illustrates a hypothetical future of Northern Eurasia where the Russian Federation has been dismantled. The territory is divided into many small, independent states, each represented by a different color and its national flag. The states are scattered across the former Russian landmass, from the Baltic Sea in the west to the Pacific Ocean in the east. The map also shows neighboring countries and bodies of water, providing a geographical context for the proposed new states.
