Yencken,2003-09-02 This important book explores the interaction of global environmental discourses and local traditions and practices in twelve countries in the Asia Pacific region Based upon two parallel groups of studies reviewing cultural influences in individual countries and the attitudes of young people across the region it has important implications for environmental policy and education Towards a "second Generation" in Environmental Laws in the Asian and Pacific Region Lin Heng Lye,Maria Socorro Z. Manguiat,2003

Laws in the twentieth century were based on economic growth and development This new century calls for the reassessment of all laws from an environmental perspective in consideration of such looming environmental concerns as global warming degradation of biodiversity and pollution This book captures some provoking thoughts raised during a symposium on second generation environmental laws held in Japan in 2002 The wide range of articles will promote greater understanding of what has been achieved with the first generation of environmental laws what is needed for the second generation and how to bridge the two Global Change and Integrated Coastal Management Nick Harvey,2007-05-31

Most of the world s population lives close to the coast and is highly dependent on coastal resources which are being exploited at unsustainable rates These resources are being subject to further pressures associated with population increase and the globalization of coastal resource demand This is particularly so for the Asia Pacific region which contains almost two thirds of the world s population and most of the world s coastal megacities The region has globally important atmospheric and oceanic phenomena which affect world climate such as the Asian Monsoon and the El Ni o Southern Oscillation phenomena The Asia Pacific region also has highly significant marine diversity but over the last few decades coastal resources such as mangroves coral reefs and fisheries have experienced large scale depletion The need to find appropriate management solutions to these and other coastal issues is made more complex by the need to take account of international scientific predictions for global climate change and sea level rise which will further impact on these coasts The idea for this book arose from a meeting of coastal scientists in Kobe Japan in May 2003 The meeting was organized by the Asia Pacific Network for Global Change Research APN an inter governmental network comprising 21 member countries for the promotion of global change research and links between science and policy making in the region
