Painted House Of Maud Lewis Conserving A Folk Art Treasure:

The Painted House of Maud Lewis Maud Lewis, Krannert Art Museum, Wyman Publishing, 2005 The Painted House of Maud Lewis Laurie Hamilton, 2001 For many years Maud Lewis was one of Nova Scotia's best loved folk painters In the 1990s she was embraced by the rest of the country when the landmark exhibition of her work The Illuminated Life of Maud Lewis travelled across Canada By the time the tour was over half a million people had become acquainted with her delightful work Between 1938 when she married Everett Lewis until her death in 1970 Maud Lewis lived in a tiny one room house near Digby Nova Scotia Over the years she painted the doors inside and out the windowpanes the walls and cupboards the wallpaper the little staircase to the sleeping loft the woodstove the breadbox the dustpan almost everything her hand touched Her house was a joy to behold and it became a magnet for tourists as well as a focal point in her village In 1979 after Everett Lewis died the Maud Lewis Painted House Society worked diligently to raise funds to acquire preserve and display the house as part of the cultural heritage of the area as well as a memorial to their beloved artist In 1984 the house and its contents were purchased by the Province of Nova Scotia for the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia In The Painted House of Maud Lewis Laurie Hamilton the conservator at the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia shows how all the different parts of the house the building itself the painted household items even the wallpaper were catalogued conserved and prepared for exhibition The preliminary stages of conservation treatment began in 1996 in a most unusual location the Sunnyside Mall in Bedford just outside Halifax where conservators worked in full view of the public The conservators used established techniques and invented new ones to complete their unique project and documented every stage of the restoration photographically The book also features more than sixty five colour photos including several taken by noted photographer Bob Brooks in 1965 for the Star Weekly Today anyone can visit the tiny house that has become a folk art phenomenon The restoration story spans two decades but the story of the Painted House continues as each new visitor to the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia finds delight and inspiration in Maud Lewis's joyous vision For Folk's Sake Erin Morton, 2016-11-01 Folk art emerged in twentieth century Nova Scotia not as an accident of history but in tandem with cultural policy developments that shaped art institutions across the province between 1967 and 1997 For Folk's Sake charts how woodcarvings and paintings by well known and obscure self taught makers and their connection to handwork local history and place fed the public's nostalgia for a simpler past The folk artists examined here range from the well known self taught painter Maud Lewis to the relatively anonymous woodcarvers Charles Atkinson Ralph Boutilier Collins Eisenhauer and Clarence Mooers These artists are connected by the ways in which their work fascinated those active in the contemporary Canadian art world at a time when modernism and the art market that once sustained it had reached a crisis As folk art entered the public collection of the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia and the private collections of professors at the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design it evolved under the direction of collectors and curators who sought it out according to a particular modernist aesthetic language Morton engages national and transnational developments that helped to shape ideas about folk art to show how a conceptual category took material form. Generously illustrated. For Folk's Sake interrogates the emotive pull of folk art and reconstructs the relationships that emerged between relatively impoverished self-taught artists, a new brand of middle-class collector, and academically trained professors and curators in Nova Scotia's most important art institutions. Canadian Book Review Annual, 1975
