

Revealing highlights and insights from

The Palace File

- How Thieu helped to elect Nixon in 1968.
- How Nixon's opening to China in 1971 led to the end of the American commitment to South Vietnam as a cornerstone of U.S. global strategy.
- How the complex relationship between Nixon and Kissinger unfolded, trapped them in their secret negotiations with North Vietnam, and forced them to create peace no matter what they gave away, no matter what the cost to their ally.
- How and why Thieu's conduct of his administration was based on suspiciousness, fear of assassination, and loyalty from his cabinet and his aides at the sacrifice of competence; how tenaciously he held out against American pressure to sign the Paris Accords; and why he continued to believe, in spite of all the evidence, that American bombers and troops would return to save him and his country.
- Why Vietnamization failed, and how dependancy on the United States paralyzed Vietnamese efforts to develop their own policies, programs, and military strength.
