

resist and struggle to counter them. She urges us not to see the world only in terms of the personal, or only in terms of the political.

Another dichotomy (that we ought to avoid) is in the separation of the private and personal from the social and collective ... Must our solutions be private or collective? Can they not be both? Why do those of us who want social justice tend to ignore calls for private accountability? And why do those of us who call for so-called "family values" and personal morality not demand the social justice in which these can flourish? Let's begin to think in holistic visions, not split paradigms. (Jacqueline Barkley, p. 192)

I plan to take her advice.

It is a fitting time for a book such as Carol Harris' to arrive on the educational landscape. In a period when education is under assault in Nova Scotia as in other parts of Canada, this book is indeed timely. In Nova Scotia the assault on education has included forced amalgamation, which has seen smaller, community schools replaced by larger, modern but sometimes alienating facilities often further removed from the communities they serve. Decentralization and site-based management have become code words for justifying the reduction of staff and services to schools and communities. The neo-conservative agenda of the government that hopes to reduce education to "work training" and "basic literacy" has created an unfriendly climate for support for the arts and the humanities in schools. In such a time a book that stresses the importance of community and the arts and arts education is welcome. Moreover, the story of one woman who devoted her life to arts and community education provides hope and inspiration to those resisting reductionist forms of education and schooling.

In a reader-friendly style that will appeal to both practitioners and lay people, Harris chronicles the life of Elizabeth Murray, or Betty Murray as she preferred to be called. The story is a fascinating one of a woman who grew up

Joanne Tompkins spent 15 years of her teaching career working in Inuit communities in the Canadian Arctic as an elementary teacher, inclusion consultant, school principal, and teacher educator. Presently she is living "down South" as a professor of education at St. Francis Xavier University where she teaches courses at the undergraduate and graduate level in the sociology of education, diverse cultures, bilingual education, and generally issues of equity in education. Her first book, Teaching in a Cold and Windy Place (University of Toronto Press, 1998) chronicles the process of school change in an Inuit school from the perspective of the principal.

A. Samier,Richard Bates,2006-11-22 The question of aesthetics as a theoretical framework for thinking about modern leadership issues in educational settings is an emergent area of inquiry that is receiving considerable attention There is a growing sense that the mechanistic approach to leadership which has been widely encouraged over the last ten years is sterile and that a more philosophical approach is now required This approach is covered here taking into account the importance of aesthetics on all aspects of the administrative and leadership world the ways ideas and ideals are created how their expression is conveyed the impact they have on interpersonal relationships and the organisational environment that carries and reinforces them and the moral boundaries or limits that can be established or exceeded While presenting a significant departure from conventional studies in the field the international contributors reflect a continuity of thought on administrative and leadership authority from the writings of Plato through to current theory Political Approaches to Educational Administration and Leadership Eugenie A. Samier,with Adam G. Stanley,2008-03-01 This collection explores the political philosophy and theory foundations for educational administration and leadership as they influence our understanding analysis and practice in the field The first section Political Philosophy The Foundations discusses the work of such writers as Machiavelli Kant and Hegel Hayek Habermas and Bourdieu as their theories apply to the educational context The second section Political Analysis The Critique examines various types of political analyses such as the politics of the policy process minority politics civil society micro politics community politics and cosmopolitan theory The last section Current Political Controversies The Practice addresses current topical issues of a political nature including the serving of the state economic agenda the democratisation of educational organisations the neo conservative agenda and globalisation The broad international perspective from which these topics are covered makes this volume an excellent addition to the fields of educational leadership organizational studies and educational administration theory Learning and Teaching

Making and Moving Knowledge John Sutton Lutz, Barbara Neis, 2008-07-09 It has been clear for some time that research does not automatically translate into knowledge nor does knowledge necessarily translate into wisdom Whether the immediate challenge is global warming epidemic disease poverty environmental degradation or social fragmentation research efforts are wasted if we cannot devise efficient and understandable processes to create and transfer knowledge to policy makers interested groups and communities How to maximize the impact of scholarly research and combine it with practical knowledge already available in lay communities are key issues in a world threatened with social ecological disasters Making and Moving Knowledge focuses directly on how knowledge is created and transferred or is blocked and atrophies It places knowledge generated by universities and governments beside practical knowledge from coastal aboriginal and non aboriginal communities and looks at how different kinds of knowledge flow in different directions Concentrating on intellectually fertile spaces at the edges of disciplines and the rich socio ecological interfaces where land meets sea authors demonstrate their commitment to knowledge transfer in their work showing how knowledge transfer can be considered theoretically methodologically and practically

Critical Perspectives in Canadian Music Education

Carol A. Beynon, Kari K. Veblen, 2012-09-01 Music education in Canada is a vast enterprise that encompasses teaching and learning in thousands of public and private schools community groups and colleges and universities It involves participants from infancy to the elderly in formal and informal settings Nevertheless as post secondary faculties of music and programs are growing significantly academic books and materials grounded in a Canadian perspective are scarce This book attempts to fill that need by offering a collection of essays that look critically at various global issues in music education from a Canadian perspective Topics range from a discussion of the roots of music education in Canada and analysis of music education practices across the country to perspectives on popular music distance education technology gender globalization Indigenous traditions and community music in music education Foreword by composer R Murray Schafer Notes from a Musical

Garden Brenda Porter, 2005 Brenda Porter grew up in the Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia and studied music at Mount Allison and Acadia universities A Sense of Themselves Carol Elizabeth Harris, 1998 This vivid portrayal of the late Elizabeth Betty Murray recreates the life and times of one of Nova Scotia's finest educators and community leaders as she does at the grassroots It examines her activities as a highly innovative rural and urban teacher as a liaison between Acadia University's education students and their wider rural community as a founding member of the provincial Adult Education division and in retirement as the author and director of a series of history plays with music about her village of Tatamagouche This is a portrait of the changing nature of community from the traditional and rural model experienced as mid century to the utilitarian and more urbanized society of today The values that informed the work of Murray and her colleagues underscore contradictions inherent in contemporary claims of education and action such as those surrounding wholistic learning greater choice advantages of parental involvement and decentralized decision making Alberta Journal
