pregnant women In a searching analysis Elizabeth Ettorre uncovers the hidden social processes involved in the development of these technologies Focussing on prenatal screening she explores how the key concepts of gender and the body are intertwined with the process of building genetic knowledge and some of the unintended consequences for women These include the injection of biology into social relationships and the development of a gendered discourse of shame and stigmatisation in which the perfect body becomes idealised and new conceptions of disability are shaped It becomes clear that the modernist tradition of scientific disinterestedness is being replaced by a new ethic the making of moral judgements by scientists Reproductive Genetics Gender and the Body draws on interviews with European medical legal and nursing professionals and raises important issues around the gendered female body the site of genetic capital It challenges professional and scholar alike to grapple with and think through their responsibilities in this complex field where the competing issues have yet to be resolved

Environmental Ethics, Ecological Theology, and Natural Selection Lisa Sideris, 2003-07-16 In the last few decades religious and secular thinkers have tackled the world's escalating environmental crisis by attempting to develop an ecological ethic that is both scientifically accurate and free of human centered preconceptions This groundbreaking study shows that many of these environmental ethicists continue to model their positions on romantic pre Darwinian concepts that disregard the predatory and cruelly competitive realities of the natural world Examining the work of such influential thinkers as James Gustafson Sallie McFague Rosemary Radford Ruether John Cobb Peter Singer and Holmes Rolston Sideris proposes a more realistic ethic that combines evolutionary theory with theological insight advocates a minimally interventionist stance toward nature and values the processes over the products of the natural world
