Coming Out of the Illusion Christopher Link, 2020-04-13 There comes a time when being terribly lost without a clue and having the proverbial black cloud over one's head must come to an end. It doesn't matter how screwed up your life has been with a rough childhood or now as an adult. I have learned that our life experiences no matter how terrible don't have to shape who we are or who we become. For instance, I personally was in and out of foster homes from about age four to eighteen. I had to overcome tremendous obstacles to bring this book to you. The number one lesson for everybody is: When you get knocked down, get up again and stand a little taller than you did before until your foundation is unbreakable. Something more: Where is it? I think everybody at one point or another has asked themselves this. Looking up at the stars in wonderment at a very young age is where it all begins. All beings are aware of their surroundings and figure out really quickly something is wrong here on this beautiful planet Earth. There are plenty of indicators such as violence and war, domination and hate, racial profiling and human suppression working for survival and fighting over resources and or the need for money, debt creation. These things are part of our collective third-dimensional consciousness and are no longer necessary as we advance together. So what are we looking for? What is the true reality? How can we better ourselves? How do we awaken to and find our true self again? Where is the love, joy, grace, morals, compassion, unity we know are the truth behind this existence? The most important question for us all to ask ourselves is: How do we break through the false reality that we have created for ourselves and the planet and keep our light shining never to be hidden under veils of illusion again? We will explore this thing called life through our own self-realization together and find some answers to these questions.

Methuselah's Zoo Steven N. Austad, 2023-08-15. Stories of long-lived animal species from thousand-year-old tubeworms to 400-year-old sharks and what they might teach us about human health and longevity. Opossums in the wild don't make it to the age of three; our pet cats can live for a decade and a half; cicadas live for seventeen years, spending most of them underground. Whales, however, can live for two centuries and tubeworms for several millennia. Meanwhile, human life expectancy tops out around the mid-eighties with some outliers living past 100 or even 110. Is there anything humans can learn from the exceptional longevity of some animals in the wild? In Methuselah's Zoo, Steven Austad tells the stories of some extraordinary animals, considering why, for example, animal species that fly live longer than earthbound species and why animals found in the ocean live longest of all. Austad, the leading authority on longevity in animals, argues that the best way we will learn from these long-lived animals is by studying them in the wild. Accordingly, he proceeds habitat by habitat, examining animals that spend most of their lives in the air (comparing insects, birds, and bats), animals that live on and under the ground (from mole rats to elephants), and animals that live in the sea (including quahogs, carp, and dolphins). Humans have dramatically increased their lifespan with only a limited increase in healthspan; we're more and more prone to diseases as we grow older. By contrast, these species have successfully avoided both environmental hazards and the depredations of aging. Can we be more like them?
