ABSTRACT

Death and dying are less addressed in the undergraduate medical curriculum. These issues are explored during a health/medical humanities module offered to undergraduate medical students. The screening of the movie 'wit' followed by group activities also explores this topic. A study exploring how this topic is addressed in Nepalese medical schools may be required.

Death is inevitable. However, there is still a shortage of medical literature addressing how medical students and doctors should behave and deal with death and regarding their own grieving process during the death of patients.¹ Medicine is intimately connected with the preservation of life and a variety of modern technologies and equipment are available to do the same. Relieving patient suffering, death with dignity and the cost of terminal care are important issues to be considered.² Cost may be an especially important issue in developing nations like Nepal where families mostly pay out of pocket for medical care.³

Death is one of the issues we address during a medical/health humanities module offered to medical and other health science students. It is the last topic to be addressed and is explored during a three-hour session. Among the areas discussed are what is death, what happens after death, whether there is life after death, and what guides us during the moment of death. Many of these areas were traditionally the realm of religion and science is only recently exploring these issues. Different types/ causes of death ranging from cardiac arrest, brain death, and molecular death are addressed in other areas in the curriculum. We also examine how doctors can cope with death, how they can support the family and friends of the dead person, why we fear death, and whether we can learn to accept it.

The five stages of grief by Elizabeth Kubler-Ross are examined. We go into each of the stages in some detail in the session. Changes in death and dying over the last five decades are examined. A major change is that death today is more likely to happen in hospitals surrounded by modern technology. The percentage of death occurring in hospitals was 54% and more in half of the 45 populations during the early twenty-first century in a global study.⁴ Among the elderly in industrialized nations deaths more commonly occur in residential care facilities. We also examine the issue of life after death and the common theories regarding this topic.

The Canadian artist, Robert Pope, who died young of Hodgkin's disease has produced a rich collection of art dealing with cancer, death and dying.⁵ We used his work throughout the module and also in the session on Death and Dying. We end the session with a discussion on how doctors can cope with death and dying. Medical students experienced substantial emotions dealing with patient deaths and coping with the loss.⁶ They felt that

Death and Dying Delmar Publishers, Delmar, Delmar Thomson Learning, 1996-01-01 This video series is organized around the OBRA and CDC guidelines The 212 tapes include 172 step by step procedures On Death and Dying Elisabeth Kübler-Ross, 2019 The five stages of grief first formulated in this hugely influential work are now part of our common understanding of loss Ideal for all those with an interest in bereavement this classic text is reissued with a new introduction looking at its influence on contemporary thought and practice Final Moments Deborah Witt Sherman, 2009-01-06 What was it like the first time a nurse witnessed death How do nurses cope with death when it becomes almost routine What lessons can we learn from their experiences Twenty five nurses from hospitals private practices and in home health care tell about their experiences with death Hear from people new to the field as well as those who have been in nursing for decades about how they deal with grief the controversies about end of life decisions the challenges of caring for people as they die and the harrowing experience of telling their family members Edited and introduced by a registered nurse the book is a resource for both nurses and anyone who wants to better understand death and dying Nursing Education in Thanatology Florence Selder, 2015-01-28 Nursing Education in Thanatology is an excellent source book for planning thanatology courses or for integrating concepts of thanatology into a nursing curriculum As the formal teaching of thanatology in schools for health care professionals is generally overlooked and ill defined many students and professionals will learn to deal with dying and grieving upon their first encounter with death This practical book will aid educators in planned inclusion of thanatology in curriculum to insure the preparedness of health care professionals in assisting patients and or their families during an emotionally difficult period There are many suggestions presented for beneficial methods of integrating thanatology education into existing courses or offering thanatology as a single course for education professionals A vital resource for inservice coordinators working with clinicians in oncology hospital staff and health professionals in community or outpatient health centers Nursing Education in Thanatology is excellent reading for helping professionals working with elderly people

The Dying Patient: a Nursing Perspective Mary H. Browning, Edith Patton Lewis, 1972 On Death and Dying Elisabeth Kübler-Ross, 2009 Denial anger bargaining depression and acceptance The five stages of grief first formulated in this hugely influential work forty years ago are now part of our common understanding of bereavement The five stages were first identified by Elisabeth Kübler-Ross in her work with dying patients at the University of Chicago and were considered phases that all or most people went through when faced with the prospect of their own death They are now often accepted as a response to any major life change However in spite of these terms being in general use the subject of death is still surrounded by conventional attitudes and reticence that offer only fragile comfort because they evade the real issues This groundbreaking book is still relevant giving a voice to dying people and exploring what impending death means to them often in their own words People speak about their experience of dying their relief in expressing their fear and anger and being able to move forward to a state of acceptance and peace Ideal for all those with an interest in bereavement or the five stages of grief this book contains a new extended introduction from Professor Allan Kellehear This additional chapter re examines On Death and Dying looking at how it has influenced contemporary thought and practice Providing Continuity of Care

Novice and Expert Nurses Bonita M. Gordon,2000 Caring for the Dying Patient and the Family Janet Moscrop,Joy Robbins,2013-11-11 This third edition of a popular textbook has been completely revised by the joint editors Janet Moscrop and Joy Robbins As in previous editions the focus is on the person dying at home in residential care or in hospital and the emphasis is on teamwork in caring for the individual and their relatives and friends Experts in all aspects of care have contributed to this complete revision of the previous text and each chapter is written by a different member of the multiprofessional team The chapter on the terminal care of people suffering from AIDS has been enlarged and consideration is also given to care of those in the terminal stages of other non malignant diseases Other new material includes chapters on complementary therapy the use of the day centre the value of volunteers diversional therapy and respite care The chapter on bereavement covers many aspects of grief and loss and there is a sensitive approach to the need for supporting staff in this specialized work Consideration is also given to the needs of dying and grieving people from differing ethnic backgrounds with varying cultural expectations in a pluralistic society The third edition offers a broad overview of the support given to the dying person and the carers by medical and nursing staff physiotherapists pharmacists social workers the chaplaincy and members of the pastoral care team Students of all these disciplines should find this book both readable and informative

The Nurse and the Dying Patient Jeanne Quint Benoliel,1967 Dying, Assisted Death and Mourning Asa Kasher,2009 Dying and death are topics of deep humane concern for many people in a variety of circumstances and contexts However they are not discussed to any great extent or with sufficient focus in order to gain knowledge and understanding of their major features and aspects The present volume is an attempt to bridge the undesirable gap between what should be known and understood about dying and death and what is easily accessible Included in the present volume are chapters arranged in three sections First there are chapters on aspects of dying written by people who have professional experience and personal insights into the nature of the processes at work and the ways it should be treated Secondly there are chapters on assisted death Euthanasia that illuminate the practices involved in the professional assistance given to persons who suffer from an incurable illness and who do not want their painful life to be medically extended Thirdly there are chapters on mourning examined in a variety of cultural contexts These provide insights for different ways of maintaining the presence of the dead in the life of the living life in the hearts Dealing with Death and Dying Sheila Lelly Blake,1976 Healing the Dying Melodie Olson,1997 This book provides the nurse with objectives and goals for care of the dying patient Healing the Dying offers specific information that when put into real life situations conveys how the treatment works or how evaluation assessments are made Family and society support are also covered with discussions of hospice and alternative bereavement services Vulnerable populations such as AIDS patients are included Towards Death with Dignity Sylvia Poss,2021-11-07 The explosion of literature on the once taboo topic of death and dying in the late 1970s had tended to pass the professional social worker by Originally published in 1981 it was to fill this important gap that Towards Death with Dignity was written Not since Kubler Ross s now classic On Death and Dying has a book in the field of terminal care been informed by so much first hand experience and so much case material allowing the caregiver to learn from the dying person himself how best to help him towards a dignified death Sylvia Poss s sensitive elucidation of what the dying person must do for himself in order to master his terminal crisis was welcomed as a major contribution to psychosocial knowledge at the time Having outlined the dying person s side of the crisis she turns to the perspective of those who hope to help him towards death other patients nurses doctors paramedical staff and social workers chaplains volunteers employers relatives and friends Towards Death with Dignity focuses on three of social work s major methods social casework community work and teaching Not only does Sylvia Poss outline what may need to be done by the caregiver but she also illustrates how she further outlines how to prepare for social work in the terminal care field and suggests an effective method for teaching terminal care skills Her book also provided for the first time a synthesis of other recent work in the field to help social workers through what had become a plethora of specialist psychosocial and medical literature Towards Death with Dignity was thus a useful practical guide both for laymen and for the many professionals involved in this aspect of the health care field It will also be valuable for those who are involved personally in moving towards their own death or are being called upon to be involved in some way in the death of a relative neighbour or friend
