

The image shows a highly detailed Minecraft construction of a medieval coastal village. The village is built on a steep, grassy cliffside that drops down to a dark blue ocean. The architecture features numerous houses with steeply pitched, brown-tiled roofs. Several prominent stone buildings with Gothic-style spires and arches are visible, including a large church or cathedral at the top of the cliff. The surrounding landscape is lush with green trees and foliage. The overall scene is a testament to the creative possibilities in Minecraft building.

G. Vince, 2003-01-01 Though the book is primarily about medieval towns in Britain many parallels are drawn with contemporary towns and cities all over Europe from Ireland to Russia and from Scandinavia to Italy It is written in the belief that medieval urban archaeology should be a Europe wide study as are the fields of architecture and urban history BOOK JACKET The Medieval City State Maude Violet Clarke, 1926 Lords and Towns in Medieval Europe Howard B. Clarke, Annegret Simms, 2017-07-14 This volume is based on possibly the biggest single Europe wide project in urban history In 1955 the International Commission for the History of Towns established the European historic towns atlas project in accordance with a common scheme in order to encourage comparative urban studies Although advances in urban archaeology since the 1960s have highlighted the problematic relationship between the oldest extant town plan and the actual origins of a town the large scale cadastral maps as they have been made available by the European historic towns atlas project are still necessary if we want to understand the evolution of the physical form of our towns By 2014 the project consisted of over 500 individual publications from over 18 different countries across Europe Each atlas comprises at least a core map at the scale of 1:2500 analytical maps and an explanatory text The time has come to use this enormous database that has been compiled over the last 40 years This volume itself based on a conference related to this topic that was held in the Royal Irish Academy in Dublin in 2006 takes up this challenge The focus of the volume is on the question of how seigneurial power influenced the creation of towns in medieval Europe and of how this process in turn influenced urban form Part I of the volume addresses two major issues the history of the use of town plans in urban research and the methodological challenges of comparative urban history Parts II and III constitute the core of the book focusing on the dynamic relationship between lordship and town planning in the core area of medieval Europe and on the periphery In Part IV the symbolic meaning of town plans for medieval people is discussed Part V consists of critical contributions by an archaeologist an art historian and an historical geographer By presenting case studies by leading researchers from different European countries this volume combines findings that were hitherto not available in English A comparison of the English and German bibliographies attached to this volume reveals some interesting insights as to how the focus of research shifted over time The book also shows how work on urban topography integrates the approaches of the historian archaeologist and historical geographer The narrative of medieval urbanization becomes enriched and the volume is a genuine contribution to European studies
