Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo Edward Phillips Oppenheim, 2020-11-29 The eyes of the man who had looked in upon a scene inordinately fantastically brilliant underwent after those first few moments of comparative indifference a curious transformation He was contemplating one of the sights of the world Crowded around the two roulette tables promenading or lounging on the heavily cushioned divans against the wall he took note of a conglomeration of people representing perhaps every grade of society every nationality of importance yet with a curious common likeness by reason of their tribute paid to fashion He glanced unmoved at a beautiful Englishwoman who was a duchess but looked otherwise at an equally beautiful Frenchwoman who looked like a duchess but was otherwise On every side of him were women gowned by the great artists of the day women like flowers all perfume and softness and colour His eyes passed them over almost carelessly A little tired with many weeks travel in countries where the luxuries of life were few his senses were dulled to the magnificence of the scene his pulses as yet had not responded to its charm and wonder And then the change came He saw a woman standing almost exactly opposite to him at the nearest roulette table and he gave a noticeable start For a moment his pale expressionless face was transformed his secret was at any one's mercy That however was the affair of an instant only He was used to shocks and he survived this one He moved a little on one side from his prominent place in the centre of the wide flung doorway He stood by one of the divans and watched
