Living with HIV in Post-Crisis Times David A.B. Murray,2021-08-18 Over the past decade effective prevention and treatment policies have resulted in global health organizations claiming that the end of the HIV AIDS crisis is near and that HIV AIDS is now a chronic but manageable disease These proclamations have been accompanied by stagnant or decreasing public interest in and financial support for people living with HIV and the organizations that support them minimizing significant global disparities in the management and control of the HIV pandemic The contributors to this edited collection explore how diverse communities of people living with HIV PLHIV and organizations that support them are navigating physical social political and economic challenges during these so called post crisis times

The Self and Social Relationships Joanne V. Wood,Abraham Tesser,John G. Holmes,2013-05-13 Although the two major research areas of the Self and Social Relationships have flourished they have done so largely independently of each other More and more research however has indicated that relationships shape the nature of the self and identity and that self views influence interpersonal processes and the manner in which people navigate their close relationships The integration of research on self and social relationships has proved a particularly rich one generating some of the most creative and insightful theories in psychology The Self and Social Relationships is the first volume that marks expedites and defines this exciting new research synthesis It serves both as a platform for authors to present their latest ideas on the topic and to encourage continued integration in this emerging field The contributions represent a diverse set of perspectives from social personality and clinical psychology Each chapter covers a topic that is central to the study of self and relationships and presents some of the most exciting research programs in the field This volume is essential reading for researchers and students in the areas of both self and relationships

Butler, Claude Jasmin, 2012-12-06 Nations around the world are experiencing a spectacular increase in longevity Society as a whole is being challenged by issues arising from this revolution in longevity Although the specter of the loneliness and existential suffering of older citizens is such that some people under the age of 65 find it difficult to conceive of a long term future persons over 85 have proven that aging does not necessarily preclude a healthy and productive life Extraordinary progress in both curative and preventive medicine justifies optimism about the quality of life and state of well being that can be enjoyed even in great old age We should look to professionals in diverse fields to develop creative solutions to the inevitable issues that will arise with aging Governments must prepare for the future health of their citizens by making long term investments to educate all sectors of society in the value of good nutrition exercise and lifestyles that enhance well being throughout life Also governments should realize that the main cause of health care expenditure is serious illness which occurs in persons of all ages and not predominantly in older people Early detection can help save lives as well Health and longevity of life will ultimately end as a political issue What is needed is long term government investments necessary for a viable health policy The question arises will world leaders be able to commit to such a policy Two major socioeconomic phenomena may have a regulating effect on this issue The first is the emergence of pressure groups that have come into being in response to a particular health issue such as AIDS The second is the emergence of ethics committees in developed nations that deal solely with health issues

Treating AIDS Thurka Sangaramoorthy, 2014-03-26 There is an inherently powerful and complex paradox underlying HIV AIDS prevention between the focus on collective advocacy mobilized to combat global HIV AIDS and the staggeringly disproportionate rates of HIV AIDS in many places In Treating AIDS Thurka Sangaramoorthy examines the everyday practices of HIV AIDS prevention in the United States from the perspective of AIDS experts and Haitian immigrants in South Florida Although there is worldwide emphasis on the universality of HIV AIDS as a social political economic and biomedical problem developments in HIV AIDS prevention are rooted in and focused exclusively on disparities in HIV AIDS morbidity and mortality framed through the rubric of race ethnicity and nationality Everyone is at equal risk for contracting HIV AIDS Sangaramoorthy notes but the ways in which people experience and manage that risk and the disease itself is highly dependent on race ethnic identity sexuality gender immigration status and other notions of difference Sangaramoorthy documents in detail the work of AIDS prevention programs and their effect on the health and well being of Haitians a transnational community long plagued by the stigma of being stereotyped in public discourse as disease carriers By tracing the ways in which public knowledge of AIDS prevention science circulates from sites of surveillance and regulation to various clinics and hospitals to the social worlds embraced by this immigrant community she ultimately demonstrates the ways in which AIDS prevention programs help to reinforce categories of individual and collective difference and how they continue to sustain the persistent and pernicious idea of race and ethnicity as risk factors for the disease Journal of the Outdoor Life

Although there has been a significant increase in studies of stress and coping processes in recent years researchers have often approached these topics from rather narrow and constrained perspectives Furthermore little communication has occurred across disciplines and research directions resulting in the emergence of several relatively isolated literatures An outgrowth of the Eleventh Biennial West Virginia University Conference on Life Span Development this volume emphasizes two major themes the importance of taking a life span approach to the study of stress and coping and the development of new and more complete conceptual models of stress and coping processes The first to approach these subjects from a life span perspective this book includes papers by distinguished researchers from each of the major periods of the life span and brings together the cognitive and socioemotional traditions in the study of dealing with pressures The editors hope that this facilitation of communication among researchers with diverse views will help create a broadening and integration of perspectives Lifestyle Medicine, Third Edition James M.
