New Promising Electrochemical Systems for Rechargeable Batteries V. Barsukov,F. of material science to develop adequate systems Electricity is by far the most important secondary energy source The present production rate mainly in the thermal electric power stations is in the order of 1 3 TW Rechargeable batteries RB are of widespread use in practice for electroenergy storage and supply The total capacity of primary and rechargeable batteries being exploited is the same as that of the world electric power stations However the important goal in the light of modern energy technology namely the economical storage of large amounts of electricity for electric vehicles electric route transport load levelling solar energy utilization civil video audio devices earth and spatial communications etc will not be met by the presently available systems Unless some of the new emerging electrochemical systems are established up to date RB s based on aqueous acidic or alkali accumulators are mainly produced today
