What's Wrong with Postmodernism Christopher Norris, 1990 What's Wrong with Postmodernism collects seven of Christopher Norris's reviews of recent work in literary theory Throughout Norris appears to assume that his readers possess substantial background knowledge in politics and philosophy as well as literary theory He clearly deserves his reputation as the most philosophically astute of British literary theorists and considering the abstruseness of the topics under consideration he also manages to be surprisingly clear Two purposes permeate the collection The first is to criticize postmodernism described as the upshot of a generalized incredulity with regard to all theories truth claims or scientific notions of system and method Through discussion of Jean Baudrillard's Selected Writings and Stanley Fish's Doing What Comes Naturally Norris argues that in addition to its obvious intellectual flaws postmodernism leads in the political sphere to malaise cynicism and apathy The appeal of postmodernism he suggests is due to the failure of literary theories based on Ferdinand de Saussure's structuralism fortunately because there are approaches to the philosophy of language other than Saussure's the postmodernist turn is not irresistible Description from <http://bookstore.autonomeia.org> April 16 2012 introductory studies dealing with the subject from different points of view followed by a section that deals with postmodernism in other arts than literature while a third section discusses renovations of narrative genres and other strategies and devices in postmodernist writing The final and fourth section deals with the reception and processing of postmodernism in different parts of the world Three important aspects add to the special character of International Postmodernism The consistent distinction between postmodernity and postmodernism equal attention to the making and diffusion of postmodernism and the workings of literature in general and the focus on the text and the reader i e the reader s knowledge experience interests and competence as crucial factors in text interpretation This comprehensive study does not expressly focus on American postmodernism although American interpretations of postmodernism are a major point of reference The recognition that varying literary and cultural conditions in this world are bound to produce endless varieties of postmodernism made the editors Hans Bertens and Douwe Fokkema opt for the title International Postmodernism
