Reginald George Haggard

Poteries Et Faïences De Provence:

Les poteries & faïences de Bougie (collection Debruge) ... Georges Marçais, 1916 Cezanne and Provence Nina M. Athanassoglou-Kallmyer, 2003-05 Discusses painter Paul Cezanne's 1886 departure from Paris to his native city Aix en Provence arguing that it was related to French regionalist politics of the time and shows how the move affected his art

The Making of a Mediterranean Emirate Ramzi Rouighi, 2011-04-15 The thirteenth century marks a turning point in the history of the western Mediterranean The armies of Castile and Aragon won significant and decisive victories over Muslims in Iberia and took over a number of important cities including Cordoba Seville Jaen and Murcia Chased out of their native cities a large number of Andalusis migrated to Ifr qiy in northern Africa There a newly founded Hafsid dynasty 1229 1574 welcomed members of the Andalus elite and showered them with honors and high positions at court While historians have tended to conceive of Ifr qiy as a region ruled by the Hafsids Ramzi Rouighi argues in The Making of a Mediterranean Emirate that the Andalusis who joined the Hafsid court supported economic arrangements and political relationships that effectively prevented regional integration from taking place during this period Rouighi examines an array of documentary literary and legal sources to argue that Ifr qiy was integrated neither politically nor economically and that consequently it was not a region in a meaningful sense Through a close reading of narrative sources especially historical chronicles Rouighi further argues that the emergence in the late fourteenth century of the political ideology of Emirism accounts for the representation of the rule of the Hafsid dynasty over cities as its rule over the whole of Ifr qiy Setting the activities of Andalusis such as the celebrated historian Ibn Khald n 1332 1406 in relation to specific political economic and intellectual developments in Ifr qiy The Making of a Mediterranean Emirate proposes a counter to the dynastic centric view of the period that pervades medieval sources and continues to inform most modern generalizations about the Maghrib and the Mediterranean
