A. Pool, George J. Bey, 2022-08-23 Pottery is one of the most important classes of artifacts available to archaeologists and anthropologists. Every year volumes of data are generated detailing ceramic production, distribution, and consumption. How these data can be interpreted in relation to the social and cultural framework of prehistoric societies in Mesoamerica is the subject of this book. Nine chapters written by some of the most well-known and respected scholars in the field offer readers an in-depth look at key advances from the past fifteen years. These scholars examine ethnoarchaeological studies and the Preclassic, Formative, Classic, and Postclassic periods and cover geographic areas from eastern to central Mesoamerica. In a series of case studies, contributors address a range of new and developing theories and methods for inferring the technological, organizational, and social dimensions of pottery economics and draw on a range of sociopolitical examples. Specific topics include the impacts and costs of innovations, the role of the producer in technological choices, the outcomes when errors in vessel formation are tolerated or rectified, the often undocumented multiple lives and uses of ceramic pieces, and the difficulties associated with locating and documenting ceramic production areas in tropical lowlands. A compelling collection that clearly integrates and synthesizes a wide array of data, this book is the definitive text on pottery economics in Mesoamerica and an important contribution to the fields of anthropology, archaeology, ancient history, and the economics of pre-industrial societies.

Ayia Irini Natalie Abell, 2022-04-01 Area B in the southeastern part of the Bronze Age town of Ayia Irini, Kea, preserves evidence for human activity from the mid Early Bronze Age to the mid Late Bronze Age or Periods III-VII in the parlance of the site. This volume summarizes the results of excavation in the area and provides an overview of the stratigraphy, architecture, and artifacts found in it. Owing to its status as one of the best-excavated and best-documented sectors of the site, Area B also provides an excellent opportunity to consider diachronic changes in the ceramic assemblage through time. Analysis of macroscopic and petrographic fabrics and evaluation of how fabric, ware, and shape categories intersect enables a detailed diachronic study of changes in pottery production, trade, and consumption patterns at the site in view of broader

Pottery-making Cultures and Indian Civilization Baidyanath Saraswati, 1978. This is an unusual exploration into India's timeless civilization by an anthropologist who has devoted six years to an extensive survey of the peasant potters of more than half of India. The author of this book writes Professor N. K. Bose has applied some methods in the study of Indian culture which have not been used by any other student of cultural anthropology in this country. His method of correlation of material culture with the total cultural system marks a departure from the conventional studies of cultural processes. He has suggested new methods of reconstructing history and his data on contemporary pottery making afford a reassessment of Indian archaeological materials. The author's extensive experience with interdisciplinary inquiry yields insight from a detailed analysis of the ethnographic data on pottery making. He makes some significant observations: there is continuity in potter craft tradition in India traceable from the pre-historic times; the survival of the ethnic groups of potters well within their respective technological zones of pre-historic pottery making makes the Aryanization of India doubtful; different regions of India have evolved their own indigenous cultures providing extreme diversity to the material base of Indian society; their unity lies in the basic philosophy of life in the higher forms of culture; to an average Indian, the diversity of cultures, food, dress, language, worship, does not really matter so long as he believes that every way of life has its own contribution to humanity and that before the inexorable law of
