The Attainment Agenda Laura W. Perna,Joni E. Finney,2014-05-01 How state leadership determines effective higher education attainment Although the federal government invests substantial resources into student financial aid states have the primary responsibility for policies that raise overall higher educational attainment and improve equity across groups The importance of understanding how states may accomplish these goals has never been greater as educational attainment is increasingly required for economic and social well being of individuals and society Drawing on data collected from case studies of the relationship between public policy and higher education performance in five states Georgia Illinois Maryland Texas and Washington The Attainment Agenda offers a framework for understanding how state public policy can effectively promote educational attainment Laura W Perna and Joni E Finney argue that there is no silver bullet to improve higher education attainment Instead achieving the required levels of attainment demands a comprehensive approach State leaders must consider how performance in one area such as degree completion is connected to performance in other areas such as preparation or affordability how particular policies interact to produce expected and unexpected outcomes and how policy approaches must be adapted to reflect their particular context The authors call for greater attention to the state role in providing policy leadership to advance a cohesive public agenda for higher education and adopting public policies that not only increase the demand for and supply of higher education but also level the playing field for higher educational opportunity. The insights offered in The Attainment Agenda have important implications for public policymakers, college and university leaders, and educational researchers interested in ensuring sustained higher education attainment.

Education and the Public Interest Edward P. St. John, 2007-05-28

Economic globalization has been accompanied by implementation of education reforms linked to accountability and public finance schemes that emphasize student choice in schools and student loans in higher education. In the U.S., these reforms are rationalized based on intermediate variables like the number of math credits completed in high school and net prices. However, the reforms rationalized based on this research are seldom evaluated in relation to outcomes, i.e., measures of student achievement and equal opportunity to attain an education. In Education and the Public Interest, the editor re-examines the political rationales for these reforms. John Rawls's theory of justice is reconstructed to develop a framework for assessing the effects of public policy on these outcomes. This volume undertakes a comparative study of the states in the U.S. to examine how education reforms influence student achievement, high school graduation, and college access, and finance schemes influence college access. Policies implemented by states in the 1990s were associated with improved achievement as measured by test scores for high school students. These policies also correlate with increased high school drop-out rates and the widening gap in college enrolment rates across income groups. This volume considers how privatization and accountability policies can be reconstructed to reduce inequality while continuing to improve student achievement and college enrolment. I enjoyed reading the book and benefited from it, and I feel confident others will as well. I am particularly taken by its sweep and by the skill and persuasiveness with which the author ties together the broad trends and themes of privatization, globalization, school reform, preparation, equity, equality, and college access.

Prof. James C. Hearn, Vanderbilt University, USA

What I especially like about this book is the framing of the importance of the topic in terms of the global, political, and economic changes and the notion of access to quality education as a basic right.

Prof. Laura W. Perna, College of Education, University of Maryland, USA

Public Policy and Higher Education Edward P. St. John, Nathan Daun-Barnett, Karen M. Moronski-Chapman, 2012-11-27
