Revolution In A Chinese Village Ten Mile Inn:

Revolution in a Chinese Village Isabel Crook, David Crook, 1959 Revolution in a Chinese Village is a ten years history of one Chinese village covering the period immediately before the setting up of the Chinese People's Republic. The authors describe in vivid detail based on first hand observation the social political and economic changes involved in passing from the landlord regime under the Kuomintang to the distribution of land to the peasants under the Communists with the organization of the villagers both for resistance to the Japanese armies and for the seizure of land from the landlords and rich peasants. The writers spent a long time in the village living with the farmers and getting material directly from them and from village records. amazon.com

The First Years of Yangyi Commune David Crook, Isabel Crook, 2003-09-01 First Published in 1998 Over a fifth of mankind live in people's communes. It deals with the first two years of one commune Yangyi which is in Shexian, the southernmost county of Hopei Province in the dry and rugged Taihang Range.

Linguistic Engineering Ji Fengyuan, 2003-11-30 When Mao and the Chinese Communist Party won power in 1949 they were determined to create new revolutionary human beings. Their most precise instrument of ideological transformation was a massive program of linguistic engineering. They taught everyone a new political vocabulary, gave old words new meanings, converted traditional terms to revolutionary purposes, suppressed words that expressed incorrect thought and required the whole population to recite slogans, stock phrases and scripts that gave correct linguistic form to correct thought. They assumed that constant repetition would cause the revolutionary formulae to penetrate people's minds, engendering revolutionary beliefs and values. In an introductory chapter Dr Ji assesses the potential of linguistic engineering by examining research on the relationship between language and thought. In subsequent chapters she traces the origins of linguistic engineering in China, describes its development during the early years of communist rule, then explores in detail the unprecedented manipulation of language during the Cultural Revolution of 1966-1976. Along the way she analyzes the forms of linguistic engineering associated with land reform, class struggle, personal relationships, the Great Leap Forward, Mao worship, Red Guard activism, revolutionary violence, Public Criticism Meetings, the model revolutionary operas and foreign language teaching. She also reinterprets Mao's strategy during the early stages of the Cultural Revolution, showing how he manipulated exegetical principles and contexts of judgment to frame his alleged opponents. The work concludes with an assessment of the successes and failures of linguistic engineering and an account of how the Chinese Communist Party relaxed its control of language after Mao's death.

Social Order and the General Theory of Strategy Alexander Atkinson, 2020-12-22 Is there a place left in international politics for the real use of violence as an instrument of policy in the nuclear age Originally published in 1981 Dr Atkinson attempts to answer this question with new considerations in the presentation of a general theory of strategy He argues that the classical theory of strategy so influential for the 19th century and for the better half of the 20th century was built on a mainly hidden structure of reasoning that still infests theory today The larger and socially rooted lessons that insurgent warfare can inform as best exemplified in the primary sources of the Chinese Civil War period reveal in a new light this hidden structure of which Clausewitz is the earliest and most eloquent example By this analysis of the insurgent and classical paradigm opposites the author intends to strip away the blinds of convention still circulating in theory today so that observers and students of international politics may see where new forms of politically motivated violence in the nuclear age seem more than ever to be headed Here we have perfect paradigm opposites In the conventional world battle field action and ideally decisive battle is the center of all other issues in which such conventional logic in the end sweeps up everything else and runs it back through the logic into success or failure of armed power on the battle field Everything hangs on this In the revisionist insurgent world where social order is weaponized as an object and source of military power through its inherent and valuable armed power structures social order replaces narrow battle field action ideally focused on decisive battle and alternatively redirects the entire logic and all other considerations including previously heroic conventional military assets are remodeled to act against armed enemy power structures inherent as always in social order for the ultimate object of military victory Again everything is on this alone Which paradigm one the opposite mirror image of the other will prevail will depend on the stability and power of the nation state and its institutions the continued and unhappy collapse on which I base the General Theory
