policy was implemented in this area according to which larger farmers had to sell part of their land for resale to the landless. Moreover, the project designed and implemented a water allocation system in which everyone could earn tradable water rights shares through participation in construction work. In 1997, the scheme was finalized and handed over to the Andhi Khola Water Users Association (AKWUA).

Population and Land Use in Developing Countries National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 1993-02-01. This valuable book summarizes recent research by experts from both the natural and social sciences on the effects of population growth on land use. It is a useful introduction to a field in which little quantitative research has been conducted and in which there is a great deal of public controversy. The book includes case studies of African, Asian, and Latin American countries that demonstrate the varied effects of population growth on land use. Several general chapters address the following timely questions: What is meant by land use change? Why are ecological research and population studies so different? What are the implications for sustainable growth in agricultural production? Although much work remains to be done in quantifying the causal connections between demographic and land use changes, this book provides important insights into those connections and it should stimulate more work in this area.

Restructuring land allocation, water use and agricultural value chains John P. A. Lamers, Asia Khamzina, Inna Rudenko, Paul L. G. Vlek, 2015-01-28. Central Asia underwent an agricultural transformation in the 20th century that was neither efficient nor sustainable. There is a need for innovations that will remedy these deficits by reversing environmental degradation and ensuring poverty alleviation. This book provides science-based findings and recommendations for restructuring land and water use and agricultural value chains to enable ecologically and economically sound practices that increase resource use efficiency, rehabilitate ecosystem functions, and enhance rural incomes. Innovations were designed in concert with stakeholders. The prospective benefits are shown for the Khorezm region, part of the lower Amudarya region, Uzbekistan, but the findings can be extrapolated to regions facing similar agro-ecological challenges.

Conquests and Historical Identities in California, 1769-1936 Lisbeth Haas, 1995-06-06. Spanning the period between Spanish colonization and the early twentieth century, this well-argued and convincing study examines the histories of Spanish and American conquests and of ethnicity, race, and community in southern California. Lisbeth Haas draws on a diverse body of source materials: mission and court archives, oral histories, Spanish language plays, census and tax records, to build a new picture of rural society and social change. A borderlands and Chicano history, Haas's work provides a richly textured study of events that took place in and around San Juan Capistrano and Santa Ana in present day Orange County She provides a vivid sense of how and why the past acquires meaning in the lives that make up the historical identities she discusses The voices of Juane o and Luise o Indians Californios and Mexicans are heard along the shifting faultlines of economic social and political change This is one of the first truly multiethnic histories of California and of the West It makes clear that issues of multiculturalism and ethnicity are not recent manifestations in California they have characterized social and cultural relationships there since the late eighteenth century
