Mary J. Magoulick, 2022-02-04 Honorable Mention for the 2022 Ellis King Maranda Prize awarded by the Women's Section of the American Folklore Society Goddess characters are revered as feminist heroes in the popular media of many cultures. However, these goddess characters often prove to be less promising and more regressive than most people initially perceive. Goddesses in film, television, and fiction project worldviews and messages that reflect mostly patriarchal culture, including essentialized gender assumptions, in contrast to the feminist empowering levels many fans and critics observe. Building on critiques of other skeptical scholars, this feminist folkloristic approach deepens how our re-mythologizing of the ancient past reflects a contemporary worldview and rhetoric. Structures of contemporary goddess myths often fit typical extremes as either vilified destructive dark and chaotic, typical in film or television, or romanticized positive even utopian, typical in women's speculative fiction. This goddess spectrum persistently essentializes gender, stereotyping women as emotional, intuitive, sexual, motherly beings, good or bad, precluded from complex potential and fuller natures. Within apparent good over evil pop culture narrative frames, these goddesses all suffer significantly. However, a few recent intersectional writers like N. K. Jemisin break through these dark reflections of contemporary power dynamics to offer complex characters who evince hopepunk. They resist typical simplified reductionist absolutes to offer messages that resonate with potential for today's world. Mythic narratives featuring goddesses often do but need not serve merely as ideological mirrors of our culture's still problematically reductionist approach to women and all humanity.

Image Makers Robert Jackall, Janice M. Hirota, 2000-07-20 Talking dogs pitching ethnic food, heart tugging appeals for contributions, recruitment calls for enlistment in the military, tub thumpers excoriating American society with over the top rhetoric. At every turn, Americans are exhorted to spend money, join organizations, rally to causes, or express outrage. Image Makers is a comprehensive analysis of modern advocacy from commercials to public service ads to government propaganda and its roots in advertising and public relations. Robert Jackall and Janice M. Hirota explore the fashioning of the apparatus of advocacy through the stories of two organizations: the Committee on Public Information, which sold the Great War to the American public, and the Advertising Council, which since the Second World War has been the main coordinator of public service advertising. They then turn to the career of William Bernbach, the adman's adman, who reinvented advertising and grappled creatively with the profound skepticism of a propaganda-weary midcentury public. Jackall and Hirota argue that the tools, trade, and habits of mind of image makers have now migrated into every corner of modern society. Advocacy is now a vocation for many, and American society abounds as well with technicians in moral outrage, including street smart impresarios, feminist preachers, and bombastic talk radio hosts. The apparatus and ethos of advocacy give rise to endlessly shifting patterns of conflicting representations and claims, and in their midst, Image Makers offers a clear and spirited understanding of advocacy in contemporary society and the quandaries it generates.

Digital Culture & Society (DCS) Cindy Kohtala, Yana Boeva, Peter Troxler, 2021-02-26 As DIY digital maker culture proliferates globally, research on these practices is also maturing. Still, particular terminologies dominate beyond their Western contexts and technocultural histories of making are often rendered as over simplified technomyths that render invisible diverse local practices This special issue brings together contributions that highlight how historicising plays a role in mythmaking and the creation of social imaginaries The peer reviewed articles present cultural historical perspectives technology and design histories and historiographies and alternative histories related to postcolonial resistance The contributions illustrate the relevance of craft to making as a reparative practice after the Salvadoran Civil War and as a leisure activity to spark innovation in mid century corporate culture the political economic background to the diffusion and differentiation of community workshops in contemporary Spain and post war Germany and the various aesthetics and politics of technology culture manifestos over the years The issue features an interview with Peter Harper of the Alternative Technology movement by Simon Sadler as well as an interview with Felix Holm and Sun Stassen on the antecedents of making and design in South Africa The special issue is rounded off with six short alternative histories of DIY making including multiple practices geographies and temporalities
