

The background of the entire image is a painting by Paul Nash titled 'Aerial Creatures'. It depicts a vast, blue sky filled with numerous white, winged creatures that resemble angels or large birds. These creatures are arranged in a complex, swirling pattern, creating a sense of dynamic movement. The sky is punctuated by several soft, white clouds. The overall style is characteristic of the Surrealist movement, with a focus on dreamlike imagery and a rich, textured palette.

Charles Hall, Paul Nash

Paul Nash Aerial Creatures:

Aerial Creatures Imperial War Museum (Great Britain), Imperial War Museum. London, 1996 Paul Nash Charles Hall, Paul Nash, 1996 Aerial Creatures was Paul Nash's own title for a body of work produced when he was an official war artist for the RAF and the Ministry of Information during the Second World War Paul Nash Paul Nash, 2000 This is a critical edition of the art writings of the painter Paul Nash 1889-1946. Alongside the very different Wyndham Lewis, Nash was the only major British artist of his generation who was also a regular critic and an essayist on art. He knew and read the leading critics of his day and evolved a distinctive position in relation to them. His relationship to British modernism and the mutual stimulus of art and criticism, the opening up of his criticism and that of others to poetic and literary influences under the influence of Surrealism, is discussed by Andrew Causey. Nash's writings span the years 1919 to 1946, with the majority dating from the 1930s; they were framed by his profession of painting and his activities as an art teacher, a product designer, and his involvement as organiser and polemicist in the art world. All of these helped to form the individuality of his writing.

Paul Nash, 1996 Art, Propaganda and Aerial Warfare in Britain during the Second World War Rebecca Searle, 2020-07-23 The War Artists Advisory Committee (WAAC) were responsible for the production of some of the most iconic images of the Second World War. Despite its rich historical value, this collection has been poorly utilised by historians and hasn't been subjected to the levels of analysis afforded to other forms of wartime culture. This innovative study addresses this gap by bringing official war art into dialogue with the social, economic and military histories of the Second World War. Rebecca Searle explores the tensions between the documentarist and propagandistic roles of the WAAC in their representation of aerial warfare in the battle for production: the Battle of Britain, the Blitz, and the bombing of Germany. Her analyses demonstrate that whilst there was a strong correlation between war art and propaganda, the WAAC depicted many aspects of experience that were absent from wartime propaganda, such as class divisions within the services, gendered hierarchies within industries, civilian death, and the true nature of the bombing of Germany. In addition, she shows that propagandistic constructions were not entirely separate from lived experience but reflected experience and shaped the way that individuals made sense of the war. Accessibly written, highly illustrated and packed with valuable examples of the use of war art as historical source, this book will enhance our understanding of the social and cultural history of Britain during the Second World War. Shadow Sites Kitty Hauser, 2007-03-29 At certain times of the day, at sunrise and sunset, the outlines of prehistoric fields, barrows and hill forts in the British landscape may be thrown into relief. Such shadow sites, best seen from above and captured by an airborne camera, are both examples of and metaphors for a particular way of seeing the landscape. At a time of rapid modernisation and urbanisation in mid-twentieth century Britain, an archaeological vision of the British landscape reassured and enchanted a number of writers, artists, photographers and film makers. From John Piper, Eric Ravilious and Shell guide books to photographs of bomb damage, aerial archaeology and The Wizard of Oz, Kitty Hauser
