Portsmouth Ships Dockyard And Town:

Portsmouth Ships, Dockyard and Town Ray Riley, 2002 For a long time Portsmouth has been known as a Dockyard town and indeed until the 1980s when the last great contraction of the yard took place this was certainly the case Portsmouth's original function was not so much that of a dockyard since these did not exist so much as a landing place for the convenience of dignitaries travelling between France and England following the Norman conquest Portsmouth's fortunes were closely linked to war and peace rather than to the market considerations which governed most town's growth In contrast to the efforts of the Dockyard which around the turn of the century was one of the world's largest shipbuilding centres Portsmouth's commercial shipbuilding sector was tiny One possible reason for this stunted development was the control of the shoreline by the Admiralty which was reluctant to sanction activities which might interfere with the movement of naval ships Moreover the Board of Ordnance was not prepared to allow the fortifications to be breached by a railway line making it difficult for the port at Old Portsmouth known as the Camber to grow By the time the fortifications were razed in the 1870s the railway companies did not consider it worthwhile to run a line to the Camber Commercial shipbuilding and engineering might have been unimportant but oddly enough for a port the clothing industry was particularly well developed In spite of the expansion of the Dockyard in 1911 there were more than 10 000 people working in the manufacture of clothing yet contemporary accounts of the town suggested that everything revolved around the building of Dreadnoughts Inside the pages of Portsmouth Ships Dockyard and Town are over 200 images of the town's largest employers including the Dockyard its associated industries and the other industries of the town They show a changed way of life that will never be replaced

Re-inventing the Ship Don Leggett, 2016-04-08 Ships have histories that are interwoven with the human fabric of the maritime world In the long nineteenth century these histories revolved around the re-invention of these once familiar objects in a period in which Britain became a major maritime power This multi-disciplinary volume deploys different historical geographical cultural and literary perspectives to examine this transformation and to offer a series of interconnected considerations of maritime technology and culture in a period of significant and lasting change Its ten authors reveal the processes involved through the eyes and hands of a range of actors including naval architects dockyard workers commercial shipowners and Navy officers By locating the ship's re-invention within the contexts of builders owners and users they illustrate the ways in which material elements as well as scientific artisan and seafaring ideas and practices were bound together in the construction of ships complex identities

Visions of empire Brad Beaven, 2017-02-01 The emergence of a vibrant imperial culture in British society from the 1890s both fascinated and appalled contemporaries It has also consistently provoked controversy among historians This book offers a ground-breaking perspective on how imperial culture was disseminated It identifies the important synergies that grew between a new civic culture and the wider imperial project Beaven shows that the ebb and flow of imperial enthusiasm was shaped through a fusion of local patriotism and a broader imperial identity Imperial culture was neither generic nor unimportant but was instead multi layered and recast to capture the concerns of a locality The book draws on a rich seam of primary sources from three representative English cities These case studies are considered against an extensive analysis of seminal and current historiography This renders the book invaluable to those interested in the fields of imperialism social and cultural history popular culture historical geography and urban history

Common People Alison Light,2015-09-17 Family history begins with missing persons Alison Light writes in Common People We wonder about those we ve lost and those we never knew about the long skein that led to us and to here and to now So we start exploring Most of us however give up a few generations back We run into a gap get embarrassed by a ne er do well or simply find our ancestors are less glamorous than we d hoped That didn t stop Alison Light in the last weeks of her father s life she embarked on an attempt to trace the history of her family as far back as she could reasonably go The result is a clear eyed fascinating frequently moving account of the lives of everyday people of the tough decisions and hard work the good luck and bad breaks that chart the course of a life Light s forebears servants sailors farm workers were among the poorest traveling the country looking for work they left few lasting marks on the world But through her painstaking work in archives and her ability to make the people and struggles of the past come alive Light reminds us that every life even glimpsed through the chinks of the census has its surprises and secrets What she did for the servants of Bloomsbury in her celebrated Mrs Woolf and the Servants Light does here for her own ancestors and by extension everyone s draws their experiences from the shadows of the past and helps us understand their lives estranged from us by time yet inextricably interwoven with our own Family history in her hands becomes a new kind of public history
