Post-partum Family Planning Gerald I. Zatuchni, 1971 Report on a two year study 1966 to 1968 of post partum family planning programmes seeking to provide birth control information to women of low income status in various developing countries in Japan and the USA covers administrative aspects education and training programmes for student physicians population policies concerning hospital based programmes biological and sociological aspects etc References and statistical tables

The Global Family Planning Revolution Warren C. Robinson, John A. Ross, 2007 The striking upsurge in population growth rates in developing countries at the close of World War II gained force during the next decade From the 1950s to the 1970s scholars and advocacy groups publicized the trend and drew troubling conclusions about its economic and ecological implications Private educational and philanthropic organizations government and international organizations joined in the struggle to reduce fertility Three decades later this movement has seen changes beyond anyone's most optimistic dreams and global demographic stabilization is expected in this century The Global Family Planning Revolution preserves the remarkable record of this success Its editors and authors offer more than a historical record They discuss important lessons for current and future initiatives of the international community Some programs succeeded while others initially failed and the analyses provide valuable guidance for emerging health related policy objectives and responses to global challenges
