Motherhood and Postnatal Depression Carolyn Westall, Pranee Liamputtong, 2011-07-21 Globally postnatal depression PND is a growing public health problem PND affects 10 to 15% of women in Western society It caused by a combination of biological psychological and social factors Two models have attempted to define and explain PND the biomedical and the sociological models The traditional biomedical model views PND as a medical condition which implies there is individual pathology and abnormality Whilst the biomedical model has been the dominant model in treating PND it has been criticized by feminist sociologists and psychologists for its rigidity in defining and explaining PND In contrast the psychosocial model of health acknowledges the biological factors that impact on emotional well being but places more emphasis on the personal and social factors that impact on emotional well being but places more emphasis on the personal and social factors that contribute to depressive symptoms such as gender poverty social disadvantage and social class The central argument throughout this book is the importance of support before and after the birth for women s emotional well being This book will also include women s journeys through pregnancy childbirth motherhood postnatal depression and resolution To date literature has focused on women s lived experiences of PND rather than their personal journeys through pregnancy childbirth and early motherhood Additionally the adjustment to fatherhood has received less attention For example little is known about the impact of postnatal depression on the partner what support partners offer when women with the intention to fill the gap in knowledge of cultural and social issues relating to pregnancy childbirth and motherhood for woman who were diagnosed with and had resolved PND
