Promiscuity, Attractiveness, Fondness for Children, and the Postponement of Parenthood Percy A. Rohde, 2006

When age begins to matter. Why postponing parenthood?, 2019-01-10 Seminar paper from the year 2014 in the subject Social Studies General grade 2-7 Humboldt University of Berlin language English abstract The paper deals with the issue of later childbearing and the driving forces behind the decision of postponing parenthood Since this is a global process which affects not only individuals on the micro level but whole populations which nowadays face many social challenges caused by the Second demographic transition Socio economic reasons mixed with cultural differences and changing values are among the main reasons for the shift of the timing of childbearing among women With the equalization of rights between men and women the educational level of the female population has increased leading to better career opportunities and the abandonment of the typical view on women as housewives The introduction of contraceptive methods and the development of medical technology have given women more freedom in the decision making process concerning family formation and childbearing but if this tendency continues what effects could we expect on the society and should governments intervene in individuals life course choices so that we do not experience lasting negative outcomes This and other questions are still left unanswered but should probably be included on the agenda

traits remain part of us as we move into adulthood so much so that some now need instruction manuals for adulting Teen Spirit challenges our assumptions about the boundaries between adolescence and adulthood Yet despite a cultural system that seems to be built on the ethos of Generation Me it s not all bad In fact there has been an equally impressive rise in creativity diversity and tolerance within society all traits stemming from core components of the adolescent character Howe s bold and suggestive approach to analyzing the teen in all of us helps make sense of the impulsivity driving society and encourages us to think anew about civic reengagement

A New Youth? Elisabetta Ruspini, 2016-03-16 A New Youth provides a cross cultural perspective on the challenges and problems posed by young people's transition to adulthood. The authors address questions such as: What are the experiences of being young in different European countries? What can we learn about the differences of being young in non-European countries? Are young people developing new attitudes towards society? What are the risks associated with the transition of youth to adulthood? Can we identify new attitudes about citizenship? On a more general level, are there experiences and new social meanings associated with youth? The volume is comparative between various European and non-European countries in order to identify the emerging models of transition. These characteristics are connected with broader social, political, and cultural changes, changes related to extended education, increasing women's participation in the labour market, changing welfare regimes, as well as changes in political regimes and in the representation and construction of individual identities and biographies towards an increasing individualization. The work offers critical reflections in the realm of sociology of youth by providing broader understandings of the term youth. The detailed analysis of new forms of marginality and social exclusion among young people offers valuable insight for policy development and political debate. Child Development Laura Berk, 2015-05-20 Child Development
