

Chapter 5

Experiences of Humiliation and Shame: A Psychosocial Analysis in Contexts of Poverty

Maria Aparecida Estanislau and Verônica Moraes Ximenes

5.1 Introduction

Poverty is a phenomenon observed through out human history. In the present study, we discuss poverty as a historical phenomenon of the capitalist mode of production, encompassing not only material aspects but also ideological, psychological, and symbolic ones. In this perspective, we emphasize the way in which the insertion of subjects in this capitalist structure has important consequences for the construction of their identities. The perverse model of accumulation of wealth and exploitation that results in poverty naturalizes poor people's condition on an ideological level and treats them as guilty of their failures. This logic has repercussions for subjectivity and cripples these individuals' potency (Cidade, Moura Jr., & Ximenes, 2012).

Góis (2012) reports how the lack of basic resources such as food, employment, housing, health, schooling, and security, as results from the disorganization of collective life in the urban peripheries, leads a good portion of the population to live experiencing disrespect, undervaluation, and humiliation. For Góis (2012), a large portion of our population has its identity built out of this scarcity and humiliation; hence, from this place of exclusion, they build an identity of oppression and exploitation. For Moura Jr. (2012), poverty reflects deprivation and presents itself as a stigma, as the social identity of the poor. In this way, it consolidates a perverse recognition of aggression and discrimination.

Humiliation, an important element in contexts of poverty, according to Ansart (2005), is an action that causes moral degradation in an asymmetrical relationship,

Preiss,2016-06-13 Explore the multiple dimensions of child and adolescent development in Latin America and get acquainted with the research from this region and how it relates to the international scientific literature This special issue presents a collection of reviews developed by leading scholars in Latin America about the state of child and adolescent research in this region Topics considered include poverty and cognitive development school readiness of preschool children peer relations and socioemotional development psychopathology and psychiatric diagnosis reading comprehension and related interventions and the development of creativity This is the 152nd volume in this Jossey Bass series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development Its mission is to provide scientific and scholarly presentations on cutting edge issues and concepts in this subject area Each volume focuses on a specific new direction or research topic and is edited by experts from that field The Psychological Well-being of East Asian Youth Chin-Chun

Yi, 2012-10-12 The rapid social change in the East Asia has brought great research attention on the family education and political impacts. The growth trajectory of the next generation is exposed to an entirely different context owing to the dual effects of traditional and modern values as well as practices. This book provides an overall picture of the developmental trajectory of Taiwanese youth as a typical example in the region. The time frame is set from early adolescence (13 years old) to young adulthood (22 years old). Individual psychological well-being in its broad definition will be used as the outcome indicator to reflect significant developmental processes during this important transitional life course. Benefitted from the rare panel datasets conducted from 2000-2009, this book has two major focuses: one is to explore the interplay among family, school, and community with regard to their influence on the individual growth patterns; the other is to highlight the potential constraint and/or strength of the prevailing social norms and values shared among East Asian societies. To be specific, different chapters will describe and analyze the life chances and growth patterns among youth with different social capitals, including family SES, educational achievement, rural/urban residence, etc. Their short-term versus long-term outcome, as indicated by various psychological well-being variables (e.g., depressive symptoms, deviant or problem behaviors, happiness, educational performance), will allow us to delineate the particular structural context that individual East Asian youth encounters and to offer constructive suggestions on family interaction, educational strategy, as well as health-related policies based on the scientific evidence. This book incorporates comparative reports from other East Asian societies and from youth panel studies of Australia and the U.S. The experience of their counterpart in the advanced societies will contribute to readers' understanding of the particular social situation that East Asian youth is embedded in the growth process. In addition, a comparative perspective will enable the reader to contemplate on the potential future development of the affluent generation in the region. Since changing social structure occurred in the last few decades, the East Asia has suffered inadequate investigation in the realm of family education and community; this book provides timely information to fill up the gap. Analyses of the valuable dataset from early adolescents to young adults will attract those who are interested in family researches in youth studies in panel data analyses as well as in the social development in Taiwan and in East Asia.

Psychological Perspectives on Understanding and Addressing Violence Against Children Scott L. Moeschberger, Laura E. Miller-Graff, 2023 Violence against children is one of the most significant widespread and preventable threats to human development in our world today. Children are the future of our society and understanding and addressing violence against children is critical to building cultures and systems that promote a just and sustainable peace. This edited volume aims to provide an integrative review of psychological research on violence against children from a global perspective. Drawing from frameworks in both psychology and peace studies contributors focus on the psychological research across global settings to illustrate the nature and effects of violence against children in various settings and examine recommendations for prevention practice and policy
