SLOCUM #171: POWDER RIVER MASSACRE. JAKE. LOGAN, Powder River Massacre Jake Logan,1993 With railroad workers dropping like flies at the hands of Sioux warriors Slocum must nonetheless act fast when a revenge crazed officer goes after the Indians responsible Original Where a Hundred Soldiers Were Killed John H. Monnett,2008 Monnett takes a closer look at the struggle between the mining interests of the United States and the Lakota and Cheyenne nations in 1866 that climaxed with the Fetterman Massacre Massacre at Powder River G. Clifton Wisler,1997 After a U S Army massacre of the Southern Cheyenne the proud warrior Wolf Running must choose the path his people will take A peaceful surrender to further Army demands Or a noble and bloody resistance Frontier Forts Under Fire Paul Williams,2017-11-09 Fort William Henry and Fort Phil Kearny were both military outposts of the North American frontier Both lasted but briefly about two years from construction until their walls went up in flames And both saw what were termed massacres by Indians outside their walls This book reexamines the traumatic events at both forts The Fort William Henry Massacre was condemned by both the British and the French as barbaric Yet these European powers proved capable of similar crimes The Fort Phil Kearny defeat traditionally attributed to Captain William Fetterman s having disobeyed orders has been scrutinized in recent years Did the women present at that time write a distorted version of events It would appear that his second in command the rash Lieutenant George Grummond led the charge over Lodge Trail Ridge Or did he The Powder River Expedition of 1865 Charles River,2020-11-07 Includes pictures Includes a bibliography for further reading The Bozeman Trail ran through the Powder River country which included the traditional hunting grounds of Lakota Cheyenne and Arapaho peoples Attempts by the natives to prevent encroachment and armed defense of settlers along the trail led to conflicts in short order Due to the presence of the Sioux in the region as early as 1864 travelers were advised not to traverse the Bozeman Trail except in very large wagon trains The U S Army also suffered that year when a party led by Captain Townshend and several soldiers set out along the Trail with a wagon train the Sioux attacked his train killing four soldiers in the assault In response to Sioux raids along the Bozeman Trail the United States Army closed the trail in 1865 to mount the Powder River Expedition against the Sioux alliance that kept ravaging settlers and the beleaguered Crows With the Civil War nearing its end spare men were hard to come by but still the Powder River Expedition was prepared under the leadership of Brigadier General Patrick Connor Charged with keeping the roads and trails of the plains open Connor s expedition was war in all but name Underequipped and without enough men the expedition turned out to be little more than a series of limited skirmishes fortification construction and requisitions for more men and materiel Almost from the start the expedition faced trouble The various division commanders had a foggy notion of which parts of the Powder River Country they were to march through with the varied surveys of the region not helping The biggest problem however was the soldiers refusal to march Occurring at the climax of the Civil War the expedition s soldiers expected to be discharged and allowed to return to their homes not stuck in the middle of nowhere fighting another battle Dissuaded from mutiny with the helpful aid of artillery the various divisions finally got under way in July The expedition faced vast open country and that coupled with lack of supplies logistics and communication beyond runners and scouts quickly took their toll Men succumbed to scurvy and the east and middle divisions failed to link up on schedule thanks largely to the lack of proper surveys of the region and general lack of knowledge of the terrain This lack of knowledge resulted in supply failures further exacerbating the expedition's plight With the soldiers lacking food in a region sparse of forage for anything except oxen and birds the natives pounced attacking the separated divisions The natives' attacks were a rude awakening for the soldiers as among the three divisions only the Native American scouts had knowledge of the area or experience fighting in the West Expecting nearly nude savages flinging spears and arrows the natives' use of rifles and captured Army uniforms took them completely by surprise Despite the lack of supplies and the Native American raids the middle and east divisions managed to link up in early September but as the united divisions marched onward to join with General Connor's division 225 horses and mules died from heat exhaustion starvation or cold thanks to a recent mountain storm Both the natives' view of the expedition and General Connor's offer an idea of the end result The Indians thinking that the commander had voluntarily retired from their front again hastened to the road passing General Connor's retiring column to the east of his line of march and again commenced their devilish work of pillage plunder and massacre General Connor himself is reported to have stated in regard to the expedition You have doubtless noticed the singular termination of the late campaign against the Indians The truth is rather harm than good was done and our troops were in one sense driven out of their country by the Indians Massacre at Powder River William W.
