Countries: A Quantitative Approach David A. Dyker, S. Radosevic, 2012-12-06 This book uses a range of S T and structural indicators to analyse the transformation process in particular the transformation of science technology and industry in the former communist countries The book originates from a sense of the tremendous need for quantitative indicators for assessing trends and performance in the post socialist economies S T systems in the region have passed through the first phase of rapid deterioration or as it is called by some analysts implosion After ten years of transformation we are witnessing a process of increasing differentiation of these countries in terms of general patterns of growth and structural change as well as specific lines of restructuring in their S T systems The question of sources of growth or indeed of stagnation is an increasingly urgent one from both the policy and academic perspectives In that context there is a pressing need for in depth assessment of restructuring patterns in science technology and industry in the region as a basis for understanding how restructuring in S T is linked to industrial restructuring and to general economic and social transformation As the contributions to this volume show there is now a critical mass of quantitative data across the post socialist countries which deserves to be studied more thoroughly in a comparative manner The changes of the last ten years have produced varying patterns of adjustment which are now clearly visible in S T and structural indicators

Central and Eastern Europe Brigitta Widmaier, Wolfgang Potratz, 1999 The central issue of this book is based on the need for Central and Eastern European economies to push ahead with endogenous development The text outlines variables and problems in such areas as the structural changes in industry and the industrial policies of countries Impact of the Implications of Emerging Technologies Evan S. Michelson, 2016-05-12 A growing problem of interest in the field of science and technology policy is that the next generation of innovations is arriving at an accelerating rate and the governance system is struggling to catch up Current approaches and institutions for effective technology assessment are ill suited and poorly designed to proactively address the multidimensional interconnected societal impacts of science and technology advancements that are already taking place and expected to continue over the course of the 21st century This book offers tangible insights into the strategies deployed by well known high profile organizations involved in anticipating the various societal and policy implications of nanotechnology and synthetic biology It focuses predominantly on an examination of the practices adopted by the often cited and uniquely positioned Project on Emerging Nanotechnologies in the United States as well as being informed by comparisons with a range of institutions also interested in embedding forward looking perspectives in their respective area of innovation The book lays out one of the first actionable roadmaps that other interested stakeholders can follow when working toward institutionalizing anticipatory governance practices throughout the policymaking process National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.),1971
