Revolution In The U S Information Infrastructure:

Revolution in the U.S. Information Infrastructure National Academy of Engineering, 1995-06-23 While societies have always had information infrastructures the power and reach of today's information technologies offer opportunities to transform work and family lives in an unprecedented fashion This volume a collection of six papers presented at the 1994 National Academy of Engineering Meeting Technical Session presents a range of views on the subject of the revolution in the U S information infrastructure The papers cover a variety of current issues including an overview of the technological developments driving the evolution of information infrastructures and where they will lead the development of the Internet particularly the government's role in its evolution the impact of regulatory reform and antitrust enforcement on the telecommunications revolution and perspectives from the computer wireless and satellite communications industries The Future of Spatial Data and Society Mapping Science Committee, Commission on Geosciences, Environment and Resources, Division on Earth and Life Studies, National Research Council, 1997-05-06 Public and private institutions are committing resources and making important long term decisions concerning the collection management and use of spatial data Although these actions are influenced by current pressures priorities and opportunities their ultimate success depends on how these spatial data activities will be relevant to future needs and demands The Mapping Science Committee in cooperation with the Federal Geographic Data Committee convened a workshop in April 1996 to examine societal and technological changes that might occur within the next 15 years The purpose was to consider within the context of spatial data activities a series of long term visions and to identify societal forces and changes that would make those visions more or less likely The workshop provided a framework for thinking about the future of U S spatial data activities Down to the Wire Allan L. Shampine, 2003 In recent years regulators and businesses have struggled to keep pace with an onslaught of new technologies that has dramatically changed the world's telecommunications networks This book gathers together research intended for those who must grapple with these changes the people who must decide whether and how to deploy new telecommunications technologies and those who must regulate the technologies The research is divided into three sections focusing on the past present and future of telecommunications innovations The first section Lessons from the Past examines what lessons concerning adoption and regulation can be learned by studying the diffusion of recent telecommunications technologies The second section Decision Making with Respect to Diffusing Technologies examines possible improvements to the decision making processes used by companies and regulators in the face of limited information and dynamic markets The final section Public Policy and Future Diffusion examines public policy implications for future technologies Strategic Warfare in Cyberspace Gregory J. Rattray, 2001 A comprehensive analysis of strategic information warfare waged via digital means as a distinct concern for the United States and its allies In the information age information systems may serve as both weapons and targets Although the media has paid a good deal of attention to information warfare most treatments so far are overly broad and without analytical foundations In this book Gregory Rattray offers a comprehensive analysis of strategic information warfare waged via digital means as a distinct concern for the United States and its allies Rattray begins by analyzing salient features of information infrastructures and distinguishing strategic information warfare from other types of information based competition such as financial crime and economic espionage He then establishes a conceptual framework for the successful conduct of strategic warfare in general and of strategic information warfare in particular Taking a historical perspective he examines U S efforts to develop air bombardment capabilities in the period between World Wars I and II and compares them to U S efforts in the 1990s to develop the capability to conduct strategic information warfare He concludes with recommendations for strengthening U S strategic information warfare defenses

Critical Information Infrastructures Maitland Hyslop, 2007-09-05 Resilience is an increasingly important concept and quality in today's world It is particularly important in the area of Critical Infrastructures It is crucial in the area of Critical Information Infrastructure This is because since the year 2000 man has been dependent on information and telecommunications systems for survival particularly in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development OECD countries and because all other Critical Infrastructures depend upon to a greater or lesser extent Critical Information Infrastructure Until probably the late 1980s it would be fair to say that the defense of individual nation states depended upon a mixture of political will and armed might The fall of the Berlin Wall may have effectively ended the Cold War and with it a bipolar world but it brought globalization and a multipolar digital world in its wake Simply put a number of power vacuums were created and these have yet to be fully filled and settled In this New World many changes were afoot These changes include the increasing irrelevance of nation states in federated structures and the export of democracy on the back of globalization One of the biggest changes though is the use of digital technology by the OECD countries This is on such a scale that these countries have become both dependent upon information technology and as individual states largely irrelevant to the new global electronic economy 1 This adaptation of Maslow's hierarchy of needs is attributed to KPMG
