

A detailed watercolor illustration of a bunch of grapes. The grapes are rendered in various shades of purple, pink, and blue, with soft, blended edges. They are surrounded by large, green leaves with prominent veins, some of which show signs of aging with yellow and orange tints. The background is a mix of light and dark washes, creating a sense of depth and atmosphere.

Deborah Sokolove, 2013-07-10 As an artist Deborah Sokolove has often been surprised and dismayed by the unexamined attitudes and assumptions that the church holds about how artists think and how art functions in human life By investigating these attitudes and tying them to concrete examples Sokolove hopes to demystify art to bring art down to earth where theologians pastors and ordinary Christians can wrestle with its meanings participate in its processes and understand its uses In showing the commonalities and distinctions among the various ways that artists themselves approach their work Sanctifying Art can help the church talk about the arts in ways that artists will recognize As a member of both the church and the art world Sokolove is well positioned to bridge the gap between the habits of thought that inform the discourse of the art world and those quite different ideas about art that are taken for granted by many Christians When art is understood as intellectual technical and physical as well as ethereal mysterious and sacred we will see it as an integral part of our life together in Christ fully human and fully divine Unveiling the Artist Within Pasquale De Marco, Embark on a

Portrayal and the Search for Identity

Marcia Pointon,2013-02-15 We are surrounded with portraits from the cipher like portrait of a president on a bank note to security pass photos from images of politicians in the media to Facebook from galleries exhibiting Titian or Leonardo to contemporary art deploying the self image as with Jeff Koons or Cindy Sherman In antiquity portraiture was of major importance in the exercise of power Today it remains not only a part of everyday life but also a crucial way for artists to define themselves in relation to their environment and their contemporaries In Portrayal and the Search for Identity Marcia Pointon investigates how we view and understand portraiture as a genre and how portraits function as artworks within social and political networks Likeness is never a straightforward matter as we rarely have the subject of a portrait as a point of comparison Featuring familiar canonical works and little known portraits Portrayal seeks to unsettle notions of portraiture as an art of convention a reassuring reflection of social realities Pointon invites readers to consider how identity is produced pictorially and where likeness is registered apart from in a face In exploring these issues she addresses wide ranging problems such as the construction of masculinity in dress representations of slaves and self portraiture in relation to mortality
