Seasonality In Human Mortality A Medico Geographical Study:

Seasonality in Human Mortality Masako Momiyama,1977 Seasonality in Human Mortality Roland Rau,2006-11-24
Seasonal fluctuations in mortality are a persistent phenomenon across populations In Western countries of the Northern hemisphere mortality is typically larger in winter than in summer which is attributed to the detrimental effects of cold to health This does however not explain why in colder countries the differences between winter and summer mortality are smaller than in countries with warm or moderate climate This book therefore investigates whether sociodemographic and socioeconomic factors play a role as important for seasonal mortality as they do for mortality in general Using modern statistical methods the book shows for example for the United States that the fluctuations between winter and summer mortality are smaller the more years someone has spent in school Characterization of Information Requirements for Studies of CO2 Effects Margaret R. White,1986 Medical Geography Ishtiaq A. Mayer,2007 Study is confined on Jammu and Kashmir India Advances In Medical Social Sciences Julio L. Ruffini,2022-03-10 First Published in 1984
The aim of this annual series is to increase communication between health social scientists and to show how anthropology sociology psychology geography economics and political science all contribute to our understanding of health and illness This first volume of devoted to an overall survey of the field Future volumes will concern themselves with the most recent advances in the various areas of study Seasonality in Human Mortality Masako Sakamoto-Momiyama,1977

Wiley,2004-03-22 Andrea Wiley investigates the ecological historical and socio cultural factors that contribute to the peculiar pattern of infant mortality in Ladakh a high altitude region in the western Himalayas of India Ladakhi newborns are extremely small at birth smaller than those in other high altitude populations smaller still than those in sea level regions Factors such as hypoxia dietary patterns the burden of women s work gender infectious diseases seasonality and use of local health resources all affect a newborn s birth weight and raise the likelihood of infant mortality An Ecology of High Altitude Infancy is unique in that it makes use of the methods of human biology but strongly emphasizes the ethnographic context that gives human biological measures their meaning It is an example of a new genre of anthropological work ethnographic human biology Medical Geography, Third Edition Melinda S.
